By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Over the heads of a deadlocked Congressional conference committee, President Roosevelt yesterday carried to the country his plea for farm funds and authority "to produce enough food for victory and a peace that will endure."

Slapping at "pressure group tactics," the President said all persons opposing the Government's food program, and sub-parity sale of Government grain to feed livestock, will be held "to strict account" by the American people.

The President stepped into the Congressional farm controversy in a letter to seven farm, labor and religious leaders who had urged him "to take this issue to the country."

He struck as the 680 million-dollar farm bill appeared hopelessly snarled in a Senate-House fight over below-parity sales and appropriations for farm rehabilitation and tenancy which the President called "essential" to assure food for both the armed services and the civilian population.

Congress in Recess

As his letter was released at the White House, new fiscal year appropriations for the Agriculture Department were three days overdue and Congress was in recess until Monday, earliest possible date of action.

A special meeting of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee was summoned for this morning by Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia to consider the latest phase of the dispute—a new bill passed by the House on Thursday, which Senator Russell denounced as "tricky."

The Senate committee on Monday is expected to substitute a simple resolution continuing 1942 appropriations, plus existing authority for the Government to continue subparity sale of grain for feed, alcohol and synthetic rubber. The latest House bill would have banned such sales except at "parity."

Still high and dry in conference was the original farm measure. In this the Senate contended for the right to market corn and 125 million bushels of wheat at 85 per cent of corn parity. The Senate also asked $293,589,000 for farm rehabilitation agencies. The House opposed, and still opposes, release of any grain below parity, except "deteriorated" stocks, which could be sold for feed and industrial uses. It cut farm security authorizations to 127 million dollars.

"The only real issue involved here is whether the Government should

Eight on Casualty List From D. C.

Six naval officers and two enlisted men who gave their home address as Washington were named on the Navy Department's latest casualty list which was released for publication yesterday.

Seven of the men, including all of the officers, were described as "missing." One, an enlisted man, was officially reported dead.

America's Wage Policy

What is the meaning of the War Labor Board's policy of "wage stabilization?" What are the facts concerning present day wage scales in relation to cost of living? In Sunday's Post, Dr. Leo Wolman writes on this subject in the first of a series of articles, exclusive to The Washington Post, on current labor problems. Dr. Wolman's experience as research director for a labor union, as chairman of two NRA labor boards, and as professor of economics at Columbia University makes him a leading authority on labor subjects. Post readers will find Dr. Wolman's series of articles well written and informative.

"A Line of Fighters and Workers That Can't Be Beat."—Page 7.

They're lined up today, shoulder to shoulder, the soldier, sailor, marine and airman, the auxiliary cop and air-raid warden, the defense worker and WAAC—in solid resolve that the declaration John Hancock dramatized with his unafraid signature 166 years ago shall live.

The skies over Washington, blazing traditionally with fireworks on July Fourth nights, will be dark this evening. Throughout the weekend, the District, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania, active on orders, will be "in readiness if not actually alerting" against the possibility of Axis bombing or sabotage.

Washington's Fourth of July, first in wartime in a quarter-century, probably will be observed in ominous stillness. There will be no parades nor any big observance that might invite acts of violence. The story of the Capital's celebration today is a negative story, traced through with a thread of warning.

First, Secretary of War Stimson urged the President not to allow a proposed patriotic demonstration, with fireworks, on the Potomac, on the grounds that a large assemblage, on a nationally observed day, might be too much provocation to Axis psychologists who lean toward Sunday mornings or patriotic occasions to get in some of their licks at their enemies' morale.

Yesterday Col. Augustine S. Janeway, Chief of Staff, Third Region Office of Civilian Defense, Baltimore, warned of possible bombings or sabotage this weekend, though emphasizing that he had nothing to indicate an attack would come.

In accordance with his directions, the District Office of Civilian Defense said it had asked chiefs of defense services to have key men or their substitutes on duty during the holiday weekend. Engineer Commissioner Charles Kutz will direct activities in the absence of Defense Coordinator J. Russell Young.

"The Third Region Office of Civilian Defense would ask the State commanders to consider the advisability of holding in readiness, if not actually alerting, a part of the organization of Civilian Defense Corps in critical areas over the coming holiday weekend," Colonel Janeway wired the State and District of Columbia directors.

3 Ships Sunk, One at Dock In Costa Rica

U-Boat Fires Three Torpedoes in Harbor; British Sailors Burn To Death in Bunks

Sinking of two more United Nation's merchant ships at sea and a third at a Costa Rica dock was announced yesterday as added toll of the Axis' submarine warfare in American waters.

The bold attack by a U-boat within the harbor of Puerto Limon, Costa Rica, sent three torpedoes into the United States ship San Pablo and resulted in the death of 23 crewmen and stevedores.

In addition, 54 lives were lost when submarines sank a medium-sized British cargo ship in the Gulf of Mexico and a small Latvian vessel in the Caribbean.

23 Trapped in Hold In Bold Harbor Raid

San Jose, Costa Rica, July 3 (AP).—At least 23 men were reported tonight lost in the torpedoing of a United States freighter by a German submarine which sneaked into the Puerto Limon harbor and fired three torpedoes at the vessel.

Officials of the Costa Rican port 220 miles northwest of the Panama Canal said the 23 men were known to have been in the hold of the vessel, the 3306-ton San Pablo, which was unloading when she was attacked.

A large part of those aboard the ship fled ashore but the 23 were unable to get out.

The San Pablo was hit two hours after she docked. She sank within an hour but because of the shallow harbor the upper deck remained above the surface.

Swift Action Is Taken

The government of this republic—the first to declare war on all the Axis—after the United States—acted swiftly by seizing control of all communications and arresting "suspicious elements."

The arrests followed closely on the United States Army seizure of 20 suspected spies in the Panama Canal Zone and in British Honduras on accusations of fueling U-boats and spotting ships to be sunk.

The 3305-ton San Pablo of the Balboa Shipping Co. was discharging a cargo when the attack started.

Enemy Repulsed On Kursk Front, Where Major Battle Now Rages

Moscow (Saturday), July 4.—Sevastopol, Russia's great Crimean naval base and fortress, has fallen as a mass of "ruins," Russia officially announced today, but its magnificent defense was hailed as a major factor in holding up the German spring offensive. It cost the Axis upward of 300,000 soldiers killed and wounded.

The Soviets announced that the Germans lost 150,000 casualties, including 60,000 killed, in the last 25 days of the siege while the Russian losses in that same period were 11,385 killed and 29,390 wounded or missing.

"German troops suffered huge losses, getting nothing but ruins," the special communique added.

It disclosed that the troops, commanders and wounded men were evacuated from the city, which was yielded to the Axis yesterday.

The main task of Sevastopol's defenders, the communique said, was to tie down on the Sevastopol sector as large a force of German Fascist troops as possible and to destroy as much man power and materiel as they could.

German Plans Frustrated

"The military significance of the defense of Sevastopol is huge," the communique declared after summarizing the cost in men and materiel. "It pinned down a great number of German and Rumanian troops, frustrated and messed up the plans of the German command.

"The iron steadfastness of the Sevastopol defenders has been one of the most important reasons holding up the so-called spring offensive of the Germans. They have lost time and suffered huge losses in man power."

In the last 25 days of siege, the communique said, the Germans threw 300,000 troops against the battered defenses of the city and used more than 400 tanks and 900 planes in their furious assaults.

The Soviets said their men smashed in those fearful last days six German infantry divisions, three Rumanian divisions, one German tank division, an independent mechanized brigade, four independent regiments, and a large number of units from other forces.

The Russians said the Germans also lost, in 25 days, 250 tanks, 300

Stepping Up the 5-Ocean War

Navy's Shipbuilding Program Runs Far Ahead of Schedule

Construction of all types of warships is well ahead of schedule and the Navy is rapidly overcoming early handicaps encountered in its five-ocean war with the Axis, the Senate Naval Affairs Committee reported yesterday.

In a statement to the Senate on naval progress in the 1942 fiscal year, the committee said the record of combatant vessels completed in the past six months "is much in excess of what was anticipated when contracts were entered into."

In some instances, the report said, the time of completion of new warships has been reduced over 50 per cent.

The report, filed by Senator Walsh (Democrat) of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, disclosed that not only had the Navy deferred some of its authorized battleship construction to give priority to aircraft carriers, but that work on some larger type cruisers had been similarly deferred. Some of the light cruisers and other vessels are being converted into carriers, Walsh said.

The report stressed that the reason for the recently announced policy of deferring battleship construction was not because the Navy felt that there may not be a future need for these ships, but because of the difficulty in obtaining material for all types of ships considered essential."

The report reflected recent "frank" testimony by naval officers before Congressional committees, but Walsh said his group had refrained from seeking information on results of military operations, except that issued to the public in naval communiques.

It referred to "the most trying conditions, considering the means available, under which the Navy has operated," and said the American people would better understand the nature of the problem when it was advisable to divulge methods taken and operations carried out.

"As a result of the information furnished, the committee realizes that the Navy has been operating under extraordinarily difficult conditions, due to the necessity of

Imperials Strike As Axis Forces Begin to Dig In At El Alamein

By Harry Crockett
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, July 3.—British forces tonight slashed at Axis Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's rebuffed forces on the northern end of the El Alamein line, 62 miles west of Alexandria, capturing numerous prisoners and destroying a number of guns which the Axis troops were trying to dig in on fixed positions.

(The British radio, quoting a Cairo dispatch, said tanks, artillery and British infantry moved against the Axis army late in the day but the enemy "withdrew rapidly from all engagements." The broadcast, heard in New York by C. B. S., did not elaborate on the action.)

The rumble of heavy guns could be heard in Alexandria, but the fact that the fighting kept more or less static indicated the reinforced imperial forces had brought the Axis advance to a halt, at least temporarily.

Lull in Tank Fighting

Dispatches from the front said bayonet and hand-grenade fighting continued throughout Thursday night, while most of the tanks were withdrawn from the battle for overhauling or servicing.

Reorganizing after their first repulse since the British lost Tobruk June 21, the main body of Rommel's armored forces was still west of the El Alamein defenses. There was no indication they had renewed their powerful drive against Alexandria and the Nile delta.

The concentration points for the Axis armies after the battering they received in their first all-out onslaught yesterday against El Alamein were three or four miles to the west of the British defenses at the coastal bottleneck.

Berlin's Claims Conflict

(Berlin dispatches to Bern, without confirmation from any other source, said German and Italian troops were within 15 to 20 miles of Alexandria Friday, that El Alamein was considered won, and that the British were retreating to the Nile. A similar report 24 hours earlier from Axis sources had said the British were falling back to the Nile with the Axis in pursuit, a claim disputed by the British communique of Friday noon which told of the repulse of Rommel west of El Alamein.

[Similar dispatches tonight declared that "several thousand excellently equipped American troops took part in the fighting at El Alamein" but there was no confirmation from any official or other sources.

[The report, considerably roundabout, was in a Reuters dispatch from Stockholm quoting the Berlin correspondent of the Swedish news-

'Make Offer' On Funds Cut, OPA Chief Told

Committee Invites Henderson to State Minimum Needs

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

A Senate Appropriations Subcommittee yesterday told Price Administrator Leon Henderson, in effect, to "make us an offer" on how much could be cut from his proposed 161-million-dollar appropriation through revising the plans for his price control and rationing organization.

Henderson's request for restoring the Budget Bureau's figure of 161 million dollars, slashed by the House to 75 million, is aimed at setting up a staff of 66,000 persons, 8000 in Washington, 23,000 in regional and State offices, and 35,000 for the ration boards.

These figures were scrutinized, digit by digit, during yesterday's closed hearing, the second in as many days, and Henderson was invited to make his own recommendations.

Committee Opinion Indicated

While no decision was reached on an estimate of OPA funds, pending a further report from Henderson, a check of subcommittee members showed that these conclusions are likely to influence its decision:

1. That the 161-million Budget Bureau estimate can be squeezed tighter without guaranteeing disaster for the price control and rationing program.

2. That the House approved total might easily invite trouble for the program.

3. That a likely figure for Senate approval would be 125 million, and a likely one for Senate-House compromise, 100 million.

4. That the OPA could be given funds on the basis of a portion of the current fiscal year—three or six months.

The latter proposal, it was pointed out, would follow the pattern frequently adopted some years ago in appropriating funds for the WPA. As applied to the OPA, an appropriation for part of the year, it was suggested, would permit Congress to keep a closer watch on the progress and plans of the price office. Since Congress is to be in session, the arrangement could be worked so as not to interfere with the needs

Dealers See Price War in New Gas Plan

Vying for Coupons Will Lead to Wild Cutting, Group Holds

Representatives of independent East Coast gasoline dealers warned the Office of Price Administration yesterday that a disastrous price war, driving many independent dealers out of business, would occur if present OPA gas rationing plans are carried out.

The dealers predicted at a meeting with Joel Dean, head of the OPA fuel rationing division, that prices would be wildly cut after July 22, when the new rationing plan goes into effect, to enable dealers to quickly get a large supply of gasoline coupons from their customers. Under the new plan the coupons would be needed to get more gas from wholesalers. Under the plan now in effect, dealers are limited to 50 per cent of last year's consumption, but are guaranteed an opportunity to get any amount up to 50 per cent.

At the meeting, Sol A. Herzog of New York, counsel for a committee claiming to represent 80,000 East Coast dealers, predicted that many Eastern areas would be gasless over the Independence Day weekend with the gas drought extending through July 10. Metropolitan Washington will feel a "tight" gasoline supply situation, but will fare better than most other areas because of the rigid control being exercised by local dealers, Harry Wainwright, research director of the District Gasoline Dealers Association, stated following the meeting. However, most stations will be closed over the weekend, he said.

Quotas Quickly Exhausted

Wainwright pointed out that dealers receive their quotas in batches designed to cover 10 days, and that most Washington dealers have voluntarily enforced proportionate quotas to avoid running dry before the end of the 10-day period. In areas where no such restraints have been exercised, it has not been uncommon for the 10-day quota to become exhausted within a few hours after it is delivered, other dealers attending the meeting pointed out.

This situation became so bad in the Baltimore area, they said, that an additional quota had to be granted to permit workers to report to

Defendant Shouts Denial

Eklund Admitted Killing Negro, D. C. Jail Prisoner Testifies

The District Court trial of John Eugene Eklund rose yesterday to dramatic heat as a District jail prisoner testified for almost five hours concerning a series of conversations that he said included an admission by Eklund of the Negro killing with which he is charged.

Three times during the day the 27-year-old defendant sprang to his feet to shout protestations and denials at the Government witness, Richard Marvin Harlow, a convicted housebreaker.

Harlow, who occupied a cell in the same tier with Eklund, said the two frequently talked and played chess together through the bars of Eklund's cell. At about 12:30 p. m., during yesterday's proceedings, Harlow said Eklund, in proposing a plot to effect his release, admitted that he killed Hyland McClaine, 17-year-old Negro. About to continue with details of the conversation, Harlow was interrupted as the slim, former college student leaped from his chair and shouted:

"This man has been lying since 12 o'clock!"

Justice James W. Morris told Attorney Harry T. Whelan to quiet his client and cautioned against further outbursts.

Under questioning by Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray, Harlow said Eklund had

Former Post Society Writer Survives Atlantic Torpedoing

Miss Dudley Harmon left her job as society reporter for The Washington Post in September, 1941, in order to go to Africa to work with the Free French. She suffered no untoward adventures until returning home last week, when her ship was torpedoed within sight of shore. She tells about it in the story below. For another story about a Post reporter, read about Al Hailey, our boxing-writer-on-leave, who has just won his wings in the Air Corps. Page 15.

All of a sudden the deck seemed to rise up and curl. The dull explosion was followed by a thick column of black smoke, and I decided to make for the lifeboats.

I had been admiring the sunset and thinking smugly that ocean travel in wartime wasn't so dangerous after all. The Norwegian freighter was a fast ship, and though we had seen a tanker torpedoed only an hour before, there didn't seem much likelihood that we would be hit. However, we two passengers, a missionary and myself, had been warned by the captain to remain on deck, for we were approaching the most dangerous zone in our two weeks' trip from Africa—the American coast.

The captain's little dog was yapping loudly until a sailor picked him up and threw him overboard. As our lifeboat slid down the ropes, the crew shouted directions at each other in Norwegian, and it was irritating not to know what they were saying. As we descended I gazed at the water and remembered tales of submarines which rose and machine-gunned survivors. I kept quiet though—I even recall grinning—but my stomach felt funny and my hand shook as I lit a cigarette.

DUDLEY HARMON

The sailors tugged at the heavy oars until we were some 50 yards from the boat. Everybody lit cigarettes as the captain shouted, "Stand by."

Night fell, and the other lifeboats became blurred, bulky shapes in the dark, but it was cozy having them there. The captain looked at his ship and wiped his eyes with a handkerchief. Ever since Norway was invaded that ship had been

Air Force Gets Equal Voice in High Command

General Wilson Is Named Assistant Chief of Army Staff

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Army Air Force gained equal representation in the War Department high command with Army ground branches yesterday, as a veteran air officer replaced an infantry general as Assistant Chief of Staff.

Brig. Gen. Donald Wilson, an Air Corps combat and command pilot, was appointed Assistant Chief of Staff for personnel matters, succeeding Brig. Gen. John H. Hilldring. Hilldring was given an unannounced combat assignment.

This step completes the reorganization of the War Department top command, ordered some months ago and designed to give the Air Force equal voice with the ground arms in Army war plans.

Handy Assistant Chief

At the same time, Secretary of War Stimson announced that Brig. Gen. Thomas T. Hardy would take over the important post of Assistant Chief of Staff for operations. The post was vacated last week by Maj. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, new commander of American troops in the European theater.

Another announcement during the day, issued by the Navy Department, was that Vice Admiral Royal E. Ingersoll, commander in chief of the Atlantic Fleet, had been advanced to the rank of admiral.

His promotion was ordered by President Roosevelt and was made possible by the retirement of Admiral Thomas C. Hart, former commander in chief of the Asiatic Fleet. Existing law limits the number of full admirals to four.

U. S. to Induct Some 1-Bs for Limited Duty

Thousands Physically Fit Will Be Freed For Active Service

Selective Service registrants with minor physical defects will be inducted into the Army for limited military service beginning August 1, the War Department announced yesterday.

Men classified as 1-B (deferred) for physical reasons, will be assigned to duty with corps area service commands and the War Department overhead, thus freeing thousands of physically fit soldiers for service in the field.

If the Army finds in examining 1-B registrants that an individual is qualified for "general" rather than "limited" military duty, he will be inducted as a 1-A registrant and probably assigned to combat forces.

Nearly Million Available

An unspecified number of 1-B registrants will be called up each month, the War Department said.

"Induction, under the new standards, will be limited to those with minor physical defects who are able to bring to the Army a useful vocation which was followed in civil life," the department added.

Induction of 1-B registrants, of which there are nearly one million, could release for duty with troops a corresponding number of men now engaged in clerical and other noncombatant work.

Among those now classified as 1-B who will be eligible for induction, the War Department said, are:

1. Men whose weight and chest circumference are under or over standard set for 1-A classification but who are otherwise mentally and physically fit and do not fall within Class 4.

2. Those who have a minimum

She's No 'Flying Dutchman'

Destroyer Shaw, Living Ghost, Sails Again to Hunt Down Japs

By Asahel Bush
Associated Press Staff Writer

A West Coast Port, July 3.—Her bow bit into a wishbone of white water. Spray swirled around the forecastle. Swells kicked up a parallel procession in her wake.

Her skipper, Lieut. Comdr. W. G. Jones, a native of Boone, Iowa, stood on the bridge, keeping a binocular watch on the course again and calling brief orders.

The crew, at general quarters, manned her guns, her great searchlight, her swiveling torpedo tubes.

This was the United States destroyer Shaw putting out to sea, 1500 tons of driving machinery and fighting power. No flying Dutchman's phantom schooner she, but a live ghost returned to plague the Japs who mistakenly thought they had sealed her doom.

December 7 found the Shaw roosting helplessly in drydock at Pearl Harbor, 20 feet above the water line. Jap bombs crashed through her forward deck. One of them destroyed her bridge. Flaming fuel set fire to the drydock, and the flames ignited her powder magazines.

Some months later the Shaw limped into this port, a sort of scarecrow man-of-war. Commander

Ford Has to Get Ration Permit To Buy New Car

Detroit, July 3 (AP).—The company of which Edsel Ford is president has made nearly 30 million automobiles since his father organized it in 1903, yet the millionaire manufacturer—like you and I and Joe Doaks—must await his rationing board's approval to get a new (1942) model.

A. DeWitt Bremer, of the Macomb County Rationing Board, said today the Ford Motor Co. president had inquired the necessary procedure for turning in his coupe, which he said was no longer large enough for his needs, on a sedan. The board sent Ford one of its regular rationing application cards.

Kunze, German-American Bund Leader Wanted as Spy, Arrested in Mexico

U. S. Will Take Steps to Return Indicted Man

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., July 3.—Richard H. Simons, Connecticut FBI agent, tonight said his office has been informed "that an individual in custody in Mexico City has admitted to Mexican authorities that he is Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, national leader of the German-American bund."

Kunze is wanted in Connecticut where he was among five men indicted on a charge of conspiracy to violate the 1917 espionage act by furnishing military and defense information to Germany and Japan by a Federal grand jury in Hartford on June 10.

In Washington FBI officials confirmed that Kunze was under arrest in Mexico City and said it could be safely assumed that steps would be taken immediately to return him to this country.

Indicted with the New Jersey born Kunze was Anatase Vonsiatsky, head of the All-Russian Fascist Party; Dr. Otto Willumeit, Chicago leader of the German-American bund; the Rev. Kurt Molzahn, Philadelphia clergyman, and Dr. Wolfgang Ebell, El Paso, Tex., physician.

Vonsiatsky and Willumeit have pleaded guilty and the former was sentenced to prison for five years as a spy on June 22. Willumeit's sentence has been deferred until after the trial of the others.

Simon lauded Mexican authorities for their efforts, saying they had been working "on this matter for some time with the cooperation of the FBI."

Charges Carrying Death Sentences Face 8 Spies

By James M. Minifie

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Four specific charges covering espionage, sabotage and conspiracy, carrying mandatory sentences of death, were preferred yesterday by the Government against the eight alleged Nazi saboteurs who recently landed from submarines on Long Island and Florida beaches.

Two of the specifications charged violations of the law of war, the others alleged violations of the eighty-first and eighty-second articles of war. The charges were filed with the seven-man military commission of general officers which was set up Thursday by President Roosevelt to try the case. The trial will be closed.

The charges were drafted at a lenghty conference between Francis Biddle, Attorney General, and Maj. Gen. Myron C. Cramer, the Judge Advocate General, who were named jointly as prosecutors, and were filed with Col. F. Granville Munson.

The stage is thus set for one of the most spectacular trials in the recent history of the United States. There was nothing comparable during the last war, when any cases of possible espionage were reduced to comparatively minor charges of subverting soldiers or discouraging enlistment. There were no convictions or executions for espionage during the last war either in United States territory or in localities occupied by the A. E. F., although death sentences were passed by courts-martial for crimes which might have been committed in civil life, such as murder.

Secretary of War Stimson was queried about the possibility of opening the trial to the public but resolutely refused.

Text of Charges Against Saboteurs

Text of the charges filed yesterday by the Attorney General and the Judge Advocate General of the Army against the eight alleged Nazi saboteurs held for trial before a military commission follows:

Charge I: Violation of the Law of War.

Specification 1. In that, during the month of June, 1942, the prisoners, Ernest Peter Burger, George John Dasch, Herbert Haupt, Heinrich Harm Heinck, Edward John Kerling, Hermann Neubauer, Richard Quirin and Werner Thiel, being enemies of the United States and acting for and on behalf of the German Reich, a belligerent enemy nation, secretly and covertly passed, in civilian dress, contrary to the law of war, through the military and naval lines and defenses of the United States, along the Atlantic Coast, and went behind such lines and defenses in civilian dress within zones of military operations and elsewhere, for the purpose of committing acts of sabotage, espionage and other hostile acts, and, in particular, to destroy certain war industries, war utilities and war materials within the United States.

Specification 2. In that, during the month of June, 1942, the prisoners, Ernst Peter Burger, George John Dasch, Herbert Haupt, Heinrich Harm Heinck, Edward John Kerling, Hermann Neubauer, Richard Quirin and Werner Thiel, being enemies of the United States and acting for and on behalf of the German Reich, a belligerent enemy nation, appeared, contrary to the law of war, behind the military and naval defenses and lines of the United States, within the zones of military operations and elsewhere, for the purpose of committing or attempting to commit sabotage, espionage and other hostile acts, without being in the uniform of the armed forces of the German Reich, and planned and attempted to destroy and sabotage war industries, war utilities and war materials within the United States, and assembled together within the United States explosives, money and other supplies in order to accomplish said purpose.

Charge II: Violation of the eighty-first article of war.

Specification: In that, during the month of June, 1942, the prisoners, Ernest Peter Burger, George John Dasch, Herbert Haupt, Heinrich Harm Heinck, Edward John Kerling, Hermann Neubauer, Richard Quirin and Werner Thiel, being enemies of the United States and acting for and on behalf of the German Reich, a belligerent enemy nation, and without being in the uniform of the armed forces of that nation, relieved or attempted to relieve enemies of the United States with arms, ammunition, supplies, money and other things, and knowingly harbored, protected and held correspondence with and gave intelligence to enemies of the United States by entering the territorial limits of the United States, in the company of other enemies of the United States, with explosives, money and other supplies with which they relieved each other and relieved the German Reich, for the purpose of destroying and sabotaging war industries, transportation facilities of war materials of the United States, and by harboring, communicating with, and giving intelligence to each other and to other enemies of the United States in the course of such activities.

Charge III. Violation of the Eighty-second Article of War.

Specifications: In that, during the month of June, 1942, the prisoners, Ernest Peter Burger, George John Dasch, Herbert Haupt, Heinrich Harm Heinck, Edward John Kerling, Hermann Neubauer, Richard Quirin and Werner Thiel, being enemies of the United States and acting for and on behalf of the German Reich, a belligerent enemy nation, were, in time of war, found lurking or acting as spies in or about the fortifications, posts and encampments of the armies of the United States and elsewhere, and secretly and covertly passed through the military and naval lines and defenses of the United States, along the Atlantic Coast, and went about through and behind said lines and defenses and about the fortifications, posts and encampments of the armies of the United States, in zones of military operations and elsewhere, disguised in civilian clothes and under false names, for the purpose of committing sabotage and other hostile acts against the United States, and for the purpose of communicating intelligence relating to such sabotage and other hostile acts to each other, to the German Reich, and to other enemies of the United States, during the course of such activities and thereafter.

Charge IV: Conspiracy to commit all of the above acts.

Specification: In that, during the year 1942, the prisoners, Ernest Peter Burger, George John Dasch, Herbert Haupt, Heinrich Harm Heinck, Edward John Kerling, Hermann Neubauer, Richard Quirin, and Werner Thiel, being enemies of the United States and acting for and on behalf of the German Reich, a belligerent enemy nation, did plot, plan, and conspire with each other, with the German Reich, and with other enemies of the United States, to commit each and every one of the above-enumerated charges and specifications.

British Reveal Loss of Cruiser, Five Destroyers in Malta Battle

By the Associated Press

London, July 3.—The British light cruiser Hermione, four British destroyers and one Polish destroyer were lost in the recent effort to reinforce Malta and British forces in Libya before they were pushed back into Egypt, it was announced officially today.

The loss of the ships was announced in Commons on June 23 by Clement R. Attlee, dominions secretary and deputy prime minister, but he did not then identify them.

Besides the 5450-ton Hermione, the destroyers were the British Bedouin, Hasty, Grove, Airedale and the Polish Kujawiak.

All were comparatively new and many were completed since the war began.

The Hermione, completed in 1939, was one of nine cruisers of the Dido class and carried 10 5.25-inch guns.

The destroyer Hasty, 1340 tons, was finished in 1939 and the Grove and Airedale, tonnage undisclosed, were completed in 1940.

(Jane's fighting ships does not list the Bedouin, which presumably was only recently completed, and gives no details of the Polish destroyer Kujawiak.)

Against the British losses an Italian 8-inch gun cruiser, two destroyers and a submarine were sunk and a battleship—one of the few Mussolini has left—was torpedoed.

In this twin-convoy battle, fought mostly from the air, the Axis lost 65 planes and the British 30.

being compelled to operate on many fronts in different parts of the world, as well as the lack of adequate naval and air bases and the limited facilities for the production of needed equipment, and in some instances shortages of raw materials—all of which handicaps are being rapidly overcome," the report said.

Problems of Training

"The Navy has also in a comparatively few months had to absorb a large percentage of its officers, seamen and pilots from reserves who have, of necessity, required special instruction and knowledge of naval methods and tactics, so that at the present time nearly three-quarters of the naval personnel have only recently been inducted into service."

The committee reported "a rapid and extensive increase" in shipbuilding facilities and said the number of yards available for building ships "has increased tremendously, with the result that the shipbuilding program has been speeded up materially."

It said the speeding-up process has been achieved "not only by creating additional shipbuilding facilities, but by working overtime, building new machine shops, and in every other possible way speeding up the program."

Concerning Priorities

Concerning the recent decision to defer construction of some new battleships and heavy cruisers, to permit concentration on carriers and other types of vessels, the report stated:

"The Navy is definitely of the opinion that it is more important at this period for a rapid production of other types of vessels, and also that it is necessary for the Navy to consider what priorities should be given the types of vessels that should be first constructed, the wartime strategic and tactical requirements for various types of construction, and arrive at a compromise in the allocation of available materials."

Destroyer Shaw Will Hunt Japs

Jones guided her from a makeshift wooden bridge erected aft. Her bow was a blunt-nosed snowplow of metal plates laden with 60,000 gallons of fuel oil to keep her from standing on her stern.

Then the Shaw became a "battle damage project," the charge rather of civilian shipyard workers than of the fleet's fighting men. But never did she lower the grimy, stringy, seven-starred little pennant that shows she is in commission. Never, technically, was she out of service.

Now the machinists and the welders have quit her decks and her innards. The fighting men have returned to their stations, and the Shaw takes to the hunt of the enemy.

Some sharp maneuvering demonstrated the Shaw's fitness.

From a fast clip forward she was thrown into full reverse and came to a tooth-shaking stop. Then she did some fancy sidestepping as Jones ordered sudden turns to port and starboard, and finally a four-minute job of bringing the fighting ship to anchor.

In the ward room, after the test, Commander Jones was asked if the Shaw had performed to suit him.

He spoke in a quick, emphatic manner and his blue eyes shone. "Yes, I believe I can say the test was satisfactory in every respect."

On deck Chief Electrician's Mate James Grady of Jeffersonville, Ind., more than subscribed to the skipper's judgment.

"The Shaw was always the best of her class," he declared. "Today she is better than ever."

British 'King of Belize' Seen As Master-Mind of Spy Plot

By Charles B. Engelke

United Press Staff Writer

Caribbean Defense Command Headquarters, July 3.—The Army released new details tonight on the smashed Central American spy ring, pointing straight at the fabulous "King of Belize," former rum smuggler and lately reputed dealer in human contraband, as master-mind of the scheme to supply oil for Axis submarines in the bottle-neck Yucatan Channel.

The oil was carried in schooners to desolate cays off the Caribbean coast, it was revealed, and the submarines surfaced in darkness to pipe it aboard, moving close inshore in deep harbors ideally suited by nature for such operations.

The "king," George Gough, prominent British Honduran businessman and a British subject, who was one of 20 persons rounded up in connection with the plot, was revealed to have been operating a fleet of 10 coastal schooners among his manifold enterprises directed from the port of Belize.

Like Smuggler of Fiction

Army investigators said his activities also included:

Operation of a shipyard on Roatan Island, 35 miles off the coast of the Republic of Honduras, which was managed by his brother.

Interest in a labor agency at Belize to recruit laborers for the Panama Canal Zone, managed by another brother.

The conducting of persons, including Europeans, into the Canal Zone illegally and the smuggling of letters and packages out of it.

The buying up of large stores of fuel oil, far in excess of the amount needed to run his boats.

Gough also was believed associated with night club hostesses in Colon, some of whom were included in the roundup on suspicion that they secured information on Allied ship movements from dock workers and passed it on to higher-ups in the ring.

No evidence pointed to Gough, a respected businessman, although the British had been working on the case for more than a year and a half, until a United States military observer made contact with British agents and correlated available information.

"Captain" Gough, as he sometimes was called, was the managing head of the Gough brothers enterprises with headquarters in Belize. He was known as a former rum smuggler. His schooners plied between Belize and the Ruatan Islands, 35 miles off the Honduran coast, northern Honduran ports, and the Canal Zone and Panamanian ports of Cristobal and Colon.

Army authorities said it was not believed that the Germans were using "freight submarines" for refueling, since the space could be better utilized for the transportation of torpedoes, spare parts, and similar equipment.

The Army authorities revealed that the tip-off on the possibility that the enemy submarines were refueling off Central America was furnished by the submarines themselves, which appeared capable of carrying out raids on Caribbean shipping indefinitely.

This, the Army officials pointed out, would be impossible without land-based refueling points nearby.

Japs Drive Toward China-Soviet Road

Chiang's Cavalry Mauling Invaders, Circled in Wuchen

By Robert P. Martin

United Press Staff Writer

Chungking, July 3.—Two Japanese columns apparently attempting a 500-mile westward offensive to cut China's supply road from Russia and possibly to gain new invasion bases on the Soviet border are being mauled by pony-riding Chinese troops at Wuchen and Anpei on the inner Mongolian tableland, military reports said today.

More than 3000 Japanese, equipped with trucks and armored cars, several days ago occupied Wuchen, north of the Yellow River on the 138-mile road between Paotow and Wuyuan. The Chinese then encircled them, and severe fighting is in progress.

Enemy forces which might be sent to relieve this besieged unit were engaged at Anpei, northwest of Paotow.

Guerillas Grow Bolder

The Communist newspaper New China Daily meanwhile reported that Chinese guerillas are operating with new boldness on both sides of the great wall in north China and Manchuria. They recently cut the 110-mile Japanese-built railway between Peiping and Jehol City (Chengteh), former summer capital of the Manchu dynasty, by destroying rails and telegraph lines, it said, and harrassed the enemy garrison in Jehol City.

In an effort to divert Japanese forces from a mopping-up campaign in central Hopei Province, below Peiping, guerilla units raided the 160-mile railway which runs east from Jehol City to connect with the Peiping-Mukden Railway at Chinchow. The newspaper said they crossed this line at will.

The official Central News Agency reported that more than 200,000 Japanese civilians from the Tokyo area had been moved as agricultural colonists to central Shansi Province, in north China, since the April bombing of Japanese cities by American Army planes. Never before in so short a period have so many migrants left Japan it said.

A. V. G. in Final Fight

Chungking, (Saturday) July 4 (U.P.).—American Volunteer Group pilots, in their last battle under Chinese colors yesterday before joining the United States Army Air Force, routed eight Japanese bombers which tried to raid the Canton-Hankow railway city of Hengyang. It was believed several of the Japanese craft were crippled so badly that they could not return to their bases.

Word of this final engagement reached Chungking in time to be announced at a banquet which Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek gave in honor of Brig. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, organizer of the group and now commander of the Army Air Force which the United States has organized to take over defense of China skies.

Belgium Starving, Premier Declares

New York, July 3 (AP).—Premier Hubert Pierlot of the Belgian government in exile said tonight on his arrival by Clipper plane that "Belgium is dying of starvation."

Here to discuss with American officials the possibility of getting food to his country, Pierlot was greeted at the Marine Terminal by an old friend, Hugh Gibson, former American Ambassador to Belgium.

War Sidelights

Aussies Help U. S. Troops Mark Fourth

By the Associated Press

Melbourne, Saturday, July 4.—Parades and fireworks were the only traditional features lacking from the Fourth of July celebration Americans enjoyed today as the Australians honored their allies.

The Australians arranged sports events, dances, singing contests and oratory that dwelt upon the Americans and Australians standing together in far-flung battle zones. Homes and buildings were decorated with red, white and blue bunting and virtually everywhere the American flag was displayed.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur had to forgo accepting an invitation to toss out the first ball at a baseball game because of the pressure of work which kept the commander and his staff at their desks.

Gen. Freyberg Wounded

Wellington, New Zealand, July 3 (AP).—Prime Minister Peter Fraser announced today that Maj. Gen. Sir Beranard Freyberg, commander of New Zealand forces in the Middle East, has been slightly wounded in the neck by a shell splinter.

Hard to Kill

London, July 3 (INS).—A diet of rainwater and sea gull blood kept American Pilot Officer Holbrooke Mann of Denver alive for 14 days in an open dinghy in the North Sea, he revealed tonight.

The 23-year-old Royal Canadian Air Force flier crashed into the sea two weeks ago. Tonight he was reported still sick but doing "very nicely."

Mann, his gunner and navigator had two quarts of water when they were forced to take to the dinghy after their plane crashed. On the eighth day they drank the last of it.

The navigator died first. The gunner died after he drank some sea water.

"Then it began to rain," Mann recalled, "and I caught some of it in a piece of canvas. On the thirteenth day a sea gull alighted on the edge of the dinghy and I grabbed it, cut off its head and sucked the blood. I also ate the fish it had swallowed."

Paris Factories Fired

New York, July 3 (AP).—The British radio tonight reported several factories near Paris had been set on fire by saboteurs and a number of automobiles, transformers and other manufactured products destroyed. C. B. S. heard the broadcast.

Italians Punish Serbs

New York, July 3 (AP).—Italian planes have scattered fire bombs over a dozen Yugoslav villages recently in retaliation for activities of Yugoslav patriots still fighting the Axis, the British radio said today in a broadcast heard by C. B. S.

New Nazi Trick

London, July 3 (AP).—German planes have bombed Netherlands civilian centers and blamed the raids on the R. A. F. in order to create hostility toward the British, a Dutch Catholic priest who escaped to England told the news agency, Aneta, today.

The priest, Father Canisius of the Dominican Order said the German raids were made systematically and usually after the British had appeared overhead.

Eight D. C. Officers and Men On Navy's 6th Casualty List

Seven Are Missing, One Dead in Last Battle of Lexington

Eight men who gave Washington as their home address, including six officers and two enlisted men, are named on the Navy Department's sixth casualty list—dead, wounded and missing—which was released yesterday.

All of the officers and one of the enlisted men were described as missing. Only one, Eugene Adam White, seaman second class, was listed among the dead.

He was the son of Mrs. Lena Shea, 1622 P Street Northwest, who only recently came here from Scarbro, W. Va., to seek work. Eighteen years of age, White was killed in the action in which the U. S. S. Lexington was sent to the bottom.

Rest Listed as Missing

The other men on the casualty list—all missing—and their next of kin, are:

Lieut. Comdr. Cornelius Tunnecliff Cross, U. S. N. R.; wife, Mrs. Eva Moore Cross, 2800 Woodley Road Northwest.

Lieut. Comdr. Harold Ruppert Lehmann, U. S. N.; sister, Mrs. C. J. Bean, 4617 Eighth Street Northwest.

Commander Warner Philip Portz, U. S. N.; wife Mrs. W. P. Portz, 3515 R Street Northwest.

Commander Ryland Dillard Tisdale, U. S. N., retired; sister, Mrs. Mildred T. Larrazolo, 2106 F Street Northwest.

Lieut. Comdr. Rintoul Thomas Whitney, U. S. N.; wife, Mrs. Rintoul Thomas Whitney, National American Red Cross headquarters, Eighteenth and E Streets Northwest.

886 on Entire List

The complete casualty list, including the names of dead, wounded and missing reported to the next of kin between June 7 and 17, totaled 886, subdivided as follows: Dead, 190; wounded, 54, and missing, 642.

"The preponderant share of these casualties," the Navy Department said, "resulted from direct action with the enemy, but included in the total are names of those who were lost in accidents at sea and in the air on duty directly connected with wartime operations. Natural deaths or accidents not connected with operations against the enemy are not included in the total."

Pointing out that the casualties cover personnel of the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, the Navy's announcement added:

"Some of those under the classification of 'missing' may have been rescued at sea and landed at isolated spots or otherwise made their way to safety at places from which they have had no opportunity to communicate with Naval authorities."

White's Brother Saved

This, as a matter of fact, was what happened in the case of Seaman White's 19-year-old brother, Edward, jr.

Mrs. Shea said yesterday, just before leaving for her home in West Virginia, that Edward, who served aboard the Lexington with his brother Eugene, had been reported missing "until a week ago" when she received a letter from him advising that he was safe and in foreign service at a point he was not allowed to specify.

Describing the two boys as "all I've got," Mrs. Shea said she was not aware when she came here recently that Eugene was either missing or dead. She plans to return to Scarbro for a rest before coming back to Washington, she said.

Eugene enlisted in the Navy on March 15, 1941—his seventeenth birthday anniversary—and was sent to Norfolk for preliminary training before joining his brother for duty aboard the ill-fated carrier on which he lost his life.

Philippine Plantation Owner

Lieut. Comdr. Cross, a native of Cape Vincent, N. Y., had made his home in the Philippines ever since graduating from the University of Pennsylvania and had been one of Manila's leading dentists for a score of years.

"All of his interests and most of his friends were in the Philippines, where he owned a coconut plantation on the island of Mindanao," his wife said here yesterday. "Naturally, when the country he loved was threatened along with the United States, he joined the Naval Reserve for active service." He had never lived in Washington.

Unwilling to believe that her husband is permanently missing, Mrs. Betty Chandler Jensen continues to hope for good news at the home of her parents, Capt. W. D. Chandler, U. S. N., and Mrs. Chandler, 5101 Tilden Street Northwest, where she lives with her five-month-old son, Milton H., jr.

Lieut. Jensen, 28, is a native of Tracy, Calif., and was commissioned an ensign in the Navy on his graduation from the University of California in 1937. He went to Cavite last September and was at Cebu when that city fell to the Japanese invaders.

Together at Pearl Harbor

Mrs. Jensen, a native of Washington, was with her husband at Pearl Harbor and witnessed the bombing of that base December 7. She returned here in April.

Commander Lehmann attended the Peabody School and McKinley Training School here where he was born August 10, 1890. In 1917 he was appointed acting paymaster in the Navy and, in 1934, was made a paymaster with the rank of lieutenant commander.

His assignments here included duty with the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, and in 1930 he was stationed aboard the U. S. S. Louisville, serving aboard that cruiser until 1938, when he was assigned to the naval air station at San Diego, Calif. In April, 1940, he was transferred to the Sixteenth Naval District at Cavite.

His wife, Mrs. Mary Lehmann, a native of Newport, R. I., a son, H. R. Lehmann, jr., 22, and a daughter, Betty, 16, now reside in San Diego. Three sisters and a brother live here. They are Mrs. C. I. Bean and Miss Marie Lehmann, both of 4617 Eighth Street Northwest; Mrs. R. E. Powell, 630 Gallatin Street Northwest, and C. L. Lehmann, 522 Jefferson Street Northwest.

Newcomerstown, Ohio, was the birthplace of Commander Portz, who entered the Naval Academy after attending public school in his home town. He served on destroyer escort duty during the first World War, later studying electrical engineering at the Naval Academy and Columbia University. Following numerous assignments at sea he was made port director at Manila, his last assignment.

His wife lives at 3515 R Street Northwest with their son, Warner, jr., a 17-year-old student at Catholic University.

Commander Tisdale was born November 15, 1894, at Indianhead, Md., the son of a naval officer and following graduation from the Naval Academy served on the Virginia and Nevada, alter being transferred to the Antilles which was torpedoed and sunk during the first World War. As a result of that engagement he received a letter of commendation for his "coolness and courage in command of the forward guns."

Another higher award, the Navy Cross, came in 1930 when he was decorated for "distinguished service" after Changsha, China, was attacked by a Communist band. All Americans and most foreigners were successfully evacuated through Commander Tisdale's "excellent leadership, good judgment and skill," according to his citation.

Retired in 1936, he was recalled to active service in 1940 and a short time later assigned to duty at the Cavite base.

Thanked Wife For Gift

The last word received from Commander Whitney was a note, "Thanks for gift, am better," which was received by his wife here in acknowledgment of a New Year present she sent him following the bombing of Cavite, in which he was wounded. Mrs. Whitney, who took up Red Cross work here following her return from the Philippines, still has hope that her husband will be located—safe.

Born in Michigan, Commander Whitney volunteered for service during the World War and was made an ensign in 1921. In 1939, he was made a lieutenant commander and assigned to Cavite. In December 1940 he supervised the evacuation of 800 Navy wives from Manila, among them his wife and two children.

Seaman King, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. King, lost his life aboard the destroyer Sims, which went down in the battle of the Coral Sea. A resident here since he was 3 years old, Eugene was in his last year at Western High School when he joined the Navy last October.

Interested in Electricity

His mother recalled yesterday that he was a member of the stage crew at Western, a group of boys responsible for electrical fixtures and stage settings. He had always been interested in electricity, she said, and, after being transferred to Pearl Harbor from Norfolk, entered a naval radio school.

On Easter Sunday, from aboard the Sims, young King wrote his parents:

"Across the horizon and under the sea there lurks certain death for each of us—a death for each individual present. Maybe we will make it, and then again maybe we won't. Who knows? Only God knows, but that is another story."

It was irony, of course, of the most tragic sort, that for King, who would have celebrated his eighteenth birthday anniversary next month, that it wasn't another story.

Maryland, Virginia Lists

The Navy casualty list also included these men from Maryland and Virginia:

U. S. Fliers Turn 40-Day Jungle Trek Into 'Vacation'

By Frank Hewlett
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Somewhere in Australia, July 3.—Sergt. Bombardier James Webb, 28, Arange, Tex., spent 40 days and 40 nights in the Papuan jungles after his bomber was shot down over Lae, but he made a holiday of them, gave dancing lessons to the natives, and returned to his base like any tourist—carrying a basketful of souvenirs.

Webb told his story while barracks mates fingered the trophies, which included native weapons, claw bracelets and a grass skirt.

He was bombardier on one of a formation of United States medium bombers raiding Lae, the Japanese base on the New Guinea north coast.

"A lone Zero fighter which kept after us stubbornly," he said, "finally got under us and put a cannon burst in the wing, then about 10 minutes later six Zeros attacked our formation.

"We battled them several minutes—it seemed like hours. A lucky shot got our left motor and another cannon burst exploded in the cockpit."

The copilot and crew chief were killed, and the pilot, Lieut. W. E. Dickinson, a Minnesotan, had a bad shrapnel wound in the arm. He ordered Webb to bail out.

"I jumped and saw Dickinson follow me out, then the plane crashed far away in the jungle. I landed in a tree and hung there about 15 feet from the ground until I was able to cut the straps with my pocket knife. Falling those 15 feet was worse than bailing out."

For four days Webb battled a swamp and mosquitos and was ready to surrender to the first person he met.

After two weeks of wandering he got his bearings and found Dickinson.

"We wandered into a village where the natives were fantastically painted with some sort of white lead. They didn't look very friendly, so we started to leave but found out they were going to hold a social dance, not a war dance.

"These natives danced something like American Indians only they hopped around in squares instead of circles. We showed them how the Indians did it."

"It was a great experience and Dickinson was a swell traveling partner," Webb continued. "His arm didn't bother him much but they have taken him to a hospital for X-rays to make sure everything's okay."

River Traffic In Blackouts To Be Curbed

Regulations to prohibit the movement of any private craft on the Potomac River during trial blackouts are being drafted by Navy and Coast Guard officials, Lieut. Comdr. P. V. Mavor, captain of the Post of Washington, announced last night.

Although orders for the complete cessation of movement on the river during an actual airraid have been long standing, no policy for boat traffic during a practice blackout had been considered until the Southwest citizens' protest against the excursion of the S. S. Potomac during the June 15 blackout brought the issue to a head, Mavor said.

Possible prosecution of D. D. Wills, manager of the Potomac River Lines, for violation of the blackout law was being considered by Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech yesterday. A telephone call by Harry S. Wender, chairman of the Southwest Civilian Defense committee, constituted a legal complaint, Keech said.

To Confer With Defense Aides

Edward W. Thomas and Milton Korman, assistant corporation counsels assigned to the Municipal Court, were instructed to confer with Wender, the civilian defense director; Col. Lemuel Bolles and wardens of the Southwest area, to determine whether there was enough evidence against Wills to warrant a preliminary hearing for prosecution under the Blackout Act.

Wills yesterday protested that he had indeed had clearance from the civilian defense office. He said that he talked to Harold Godwin, publicity officer for the defense organization, who had told him that there was no prohibition against navigation lights on river craft.

Godwin said that he did not presume to set any policy for the defense office and that he had told Wills the river was entirely under Navy jurisdiction and he should apply to the captain of the port. Wills admitted that he had gone no further than to Godwin for authrization to run his boat, contending that the Potomac River was the only one in the entire country that happens to be within municipal jurisdiction.

River Under Navy Control

Mavor said the river was entirely under Navy control and had been immemorially.

Stating that it was the intention of the Coast Guard to prohibit all movement of private boats during trial blackouts, Mavor said the problem of what had happened on June 15 did not concern the Navy at present.

"Although the boat might have observed a blackout period, she was lighted from top to bottom when she came up the river," he said. "As I understand it, the trouble involves the lights used when she docked. What lights were showing on the docks and from cars driving away after the excursion are clearly for the civilian defense office to act upon."

Bolles said that so far as the docking was concerned, either there was or there was not a violation of the Blackout Act. "This should be easy for the Corporation Counsel to determine, and if he finds that there was actually an infraction of rules, proper steps should be taken," he said.

Maiden Flight of 70-Ton Flying Battleship Heralds New Era of Military Transportation

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

SKY BATTLESHIP GOES ALOFT—The Mars is shown on her first official flight yesterday over the Chesapeake Bay

By James E. Hague
Associated Press Staff Writer

Baltimore, July 3.—The Navy's "flying battleship," the 70-ton Mars, made its maiden flight today and an officer said the test heralded "daily delivery" of American men and arms to fighting fronts everywhere.

After five years of research and work by the Glenn L. Martin Co., the silver and gold giant of the skies lifted her blunt nose off the waters of Chesapeake Bay, air-borne for the first time.

Comdr. Clarence H. Schildauer of the Navy's air transport service, pointed to the Mars as she climbed and said:

"There is the means for daily delivery of fighting men and fighting materials to any point in the world. The era of air borne transport is at hand."

Such transport vessels as the Mars, the biggest flying boat in the world, might mean, he said, the difference between American forces being "the attackers instead of the attacked."

The huge boat seemed to fill the sky with her long fuselage and 200 feet of wing, but Glenn L. Martin, the builder, said her size wouldn't make her easy game for fighter planes and antiaircraft gunners.

The Mars is really a "flying battleship," he claimed. "She is more formidable than the battleships of the present day because she cannot be shot down unless her wings literally are shot off."

He, too, saw the Mars as a trump card in the battle of cargoes.

Only 16 men were aboard for the maiden flight today, but there was room for 150 men and more. There was room, too, for enough gasoline to carry her to Europe and back.

Thirty seconds after William K. Ebel, crack Martin test pilot, gunned her four motors, there was sky between the hull and the water. A bat-like amphibian, streaking alongside, accentuated the bigness of the boat.

This time there was none of the trouble which spoiled her attempted debut several months ago. Then a propeller broke loose and wrenched one of the 2000-horsepower engines out of its nacelle, starting a fire.

Today it was different.

The whole test was as effortless as a routine spin. The big ship lifted as smoothly as an elevator.

Torpedoes cannot sink the Mars and shellfire cannot stop her, Martin said, and her firepower is such that an attacker could be blasted from the sky long before it could seriously damage the armored giant.

"She cannot be downed unless her wings literally are shot off," Martin asserted.

The aviation pioneer, who built the B-26 bombers which surprised the Japs at Midway and in the Aleutians, predicted for ships of the Mars' type an even brighter future in the commercial airways of post-war days.

Flying ships of this size could be delivered in two years, Martin continued, and are valuable for carrying cargo as well as for military purposes.

Her heavy armor and self-sealing gas tanks "would make ineffective the present fire that brings down lighter ships," he said.

Asked whether the fighter plane now is on the way out, Martin replied that lighter planes had lost ground.

"A few shells through the Mars make no difference," he continued. "You can't knock that kind of a ship down easily. Not only is she armored, but she carries a greater gunpower than the ships attacking her . . .

Roosevelt Signs 7 Bills for $44,867,764,981

President Roosevelt yesterday signed seven appropriation bills totaling $44,867,764,981, including the record $42,820,003,068 Army supply bill which is expected to provide the final punch for a victorious offensive on enemy soil.

The six other appropriations were dwarfed by the astronomical size of the Army bill—largest single money measure in history—which includes $11,316,892,210 for 23,550 planes and equipment for the air forces, and $9,948,319,237 for "almost 100,000" tanks and other mechanized units.

The measure brought total war expenditures and contractual authorizations to 228 billion dollars.

The other appropriations signed by Mr. Roosevelt provided: For the State, Justice and Commerce Departments, $426,281,885; Labor-Federal Security, $1,071,574,318; second deficiency, $53,721,999; Interior Department, $178,099,712; Works Project Administration, $282,584,000, and District of Columbia war housing, $32,500,000.

He also signed a bill authorizing an additional 110 millions for access roads to military and naval reservations, war plants and sources of raw materials.

The war appropriations includes $10,739,589,342 to pay and maintain the Army as it approaches the 4½-million-man mark, the figure scheduled to be reached during the 1943 fiscal year.

The House Appropriations Committee said the 23,550 planes will "complete the War Department's part of the program enunciated by the President on January 6, calling for production of 60,000 planes in the calendar year 1942, and 125,000 in the calendar year 1943."

The exact number of tanks provided was not disclosed for military reasons, but a hint was provided by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat) of Oklahoma, chairman of the Senate Military Appropriations Subcommittee.

"We are now making two good tanks," he said. "They are of different sizes. We are making a very large number. The amount in the bill for ordnance will provide for almost 100,000 tanks. I don't desire to disclose the exact number for reasons of military secrecy."

Also included in the bill: Training and education, $44,097,840; Signal Corps, $2,617,506,025; Engineer Corps, $874,132,192; chemical warfare, $620,546,241; seacoast defense, $97,249,641; transportation, including equipment, $3,721,692,958; construction and maintenance of establishments, $2,445,945,000; miscellaneous supplies, equipment and services, $158,403,730; miscellaneous, including administrative expenses, $229,967,951, and civil components, $5,684,000.

New Trial Asked For Traitor Who Aided Nazi Flier

Detroit, July 3 (AP).—Defense counsel demanded a new trial today for Max Stephan, restaurant-keeper and naturalized citizen, who was convicted of treason by a U. S. District Court jury yesterday, for aiding an escaped Nazi flier.

Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle will hear the new trial motion on July 13.

Vern C. Amberson, Stephan's attorney, said in his petition that the conviction of the former German imperial army sergeant was contrary to law, to the weight of the evidence and to the defendant's personal rights.

769 Negroes Enrolled In Army Officer Camps

Secretary of War Stimson disclosed yesterday that 769 Negro soldiers were enrolled in Army Officer Candidates Schools on June 15, training for commissions as second lieutenants.

This is an increase of 172 colored officer candidates in the past month, Stimson said those in training were distributed among virtually all Army branches.

U. S. Dollars Sell at Bargain Rates Abroad

By Felix Cotten
International News Service Staff Writer

American dollars are being bootlegged at bargain prices in "black markets" that have sprung up in certain European countries and throughout Latin America, official quarters revealed last night.

These black markets where dollars for 50 and 75 cents, it is said, are the direct result of measures adopted to prevent the Axis from deriving any benefit from American currency looted from overrun countries and taken from captive businessmen and other prisoners.

The Germans and Japs, it is pointed out, have been trying desperately to turn to important war uses the vast quantities of American currency seized in overrun European cities and in Hongkong, and rifled from the pockets of captives.

Examples of such efforts are the eight saboteurs landed from German submarines on the Eastern coast with nearly $170,000 in American currency, almost certainly "hot money." The liberal use of Uncle Sam's stolen currency, in fact, is said to go far in maintaining spy and propaganda organizations in Latin America.

All Over $250 Is Confiscated

To curb use of looted currency, the United States Treasury takes from persons entering the country any amout in excess of $250. In order to recover any excess, the person entering the country must make application for it and prove that it is not "hot money."

The effect, it is reported, has been to dam up the flow of American currency into the United States with the result that many holders are glad to dispose of bills at less than their face value.

American dollars, official sources have been advised, have been sold in Mexico City for the Mexican equivalent of 75 cents, and in Lisbon, Portugal, for 50 cents.

The black markets may increase, and "hot" dollars probably will be sold for even lower prices, when South American countries adopt restrictions now being drawn up to prevent use by the Axis of American currency within their boundaries.

These measures call for owners of American currency to report their holdings to the governments of their respective countries. Heavy penalties are contemplated for persons found to have unreported American currency in their possession after specified dates.

Latin Countries Help

Latin-American countries in many cases have already taken steps to prevent imports of American currency. Plans are under way for restrictions on exports from these countries.

In other words, the United States Government is working in every possible way to prevent use of looted American currency. Numbers of bills known to be in Axis hands have been compiled, and a watch is kept for them. The aid of Latin-American governments is being enlisted. Discounting of American currency in the black markets attests the success of this campaign, to date.

Nevertheless, vast quantities of American currency have found their way to Latin-America. Much of the money was sent to southern republics in Spanish ships, official sources said.

In many cases, persons have picked up quantities of American currency at bargain prices and have tried to bring it into the United States. But Treasury vigilance is reported to have thwarted such attempts.

3. Registrants whose hearing in one or both ears is not less than 5-20. Complete deafness in one ear will not result in disqualification, provided hearing is 10-20 or better in the other ear. Nor will disqualification result from loss of both external ears provided the registrant has followed a useful vocation in civil life.

4. Men with insufficient teeth to qualify for 1-A, provided the defect is correctible by dentures and there are no evidences of extensive areas of infection or disease of the jaws, the correction of which would require protracted treatment.

5. Those with a lateral deviation of the spine of less than three inches from the normal midline.

6. Men who have lost an entire thumb on either hand, or three entire fingers provided the thumb remains.

7. Registrants who have lost a great toe or its dorsal flexion, or who have a hammer toe or webbed toes, provided these or other defects do not prevent them from wearing a military shoe or from following a useful vocation in civil life.

8. Men who have been able to follow a useful vocation in civil life—despite "moderate deformities of one or both upper extremities (arms, hands and fingers), one or both lower extremities legs, feet and toes) or moderate deformities of the clavicle, ribs or scapula."

Order Effective Here

Locally, on the heels of the War Department's announcement, District Selective Service officials revealed that a "limited number" of white 1-B registrants will be inducted in August and assigned to corps area service commands where they will relieve soldiers qualified for combat service.

To fill the August call, local boards here will go to the beginning of their order lists and send 1-B men in the order of their original call. Ten per cent of all men who take their local board physical examinations this month will be 1-B registrants.

District headquarters also revealed that quotas for volunteer officer candidates are being enlarged and, accordingly, 147 men in Class 3-A who have been deferred because of dependents will be interviewed beginning Monday of next week and given physical examinations at Bolling Field. The first of this group will be inducted into the Army late this month or early in August.

Three Groups Inducted

Also released for publication by District headquarters were the names of three groups of men: One of 36 Negroes who were inducted June 18 and reported to camp Thursday; a second group of 29 registrants who reported to camp yesterday after being inducted on June 19 and the last a contingent of 33 men who were inducted June 20 and will report to camp next Monday.

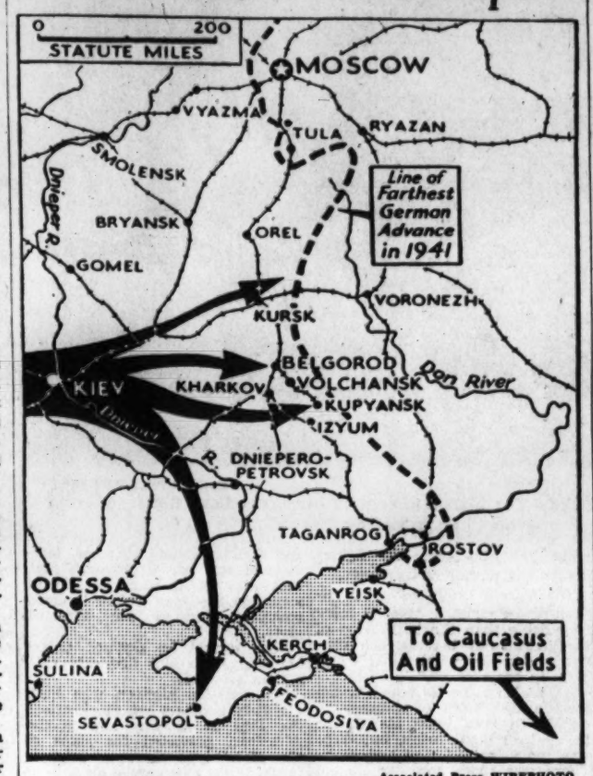
Nazis Get Nothing But Ruins As Reds Evacuate Sevastopol



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

FOURTH SPEARHEAD AIMED AT RUSSIA—Moscow has announced the Nazis have opened a new drive in the Belgorod-Volchansk sector, north of Kharkov—adding a fourth prong to the German attack on the southern Russian front planes and 250 guns.

The regular midnight communique announced the Red army also had destroyed hundreds of German tanks and thousands of Nazi infantrymen in bitter fighting now in progress on the Kursk front, 280 miles south of Moscow, where the main battle appeared to have turned.

The Russians said their own losses in the Sevastopol battle, in addition to the dead, were 21,090 wounded and 8300 missing between June 6 and July 3. Thirty tanks, 77 planes and 300 guns were reported destroyed.

The communique said Soviet infantry and sailors, cut off from land communications and fighting with almost no protection from the air, "displayed miracles of courage and bravery in the task of defending Sevastopol."

The last ditch defenders of the big Black Sea fortress evacuated Sevastopol after an heroic eight-month siege, the Russians acknowledged. Presumably the gallant but decimated garrison still is fighting outside the city in a narrow corner of the peninsula.

The greatest action, however, rolled along the Kursk sector, over a wide front where the Germans threw waves of men against the Reds peasant troops in an effort to break through toward the Caucasus and separate the southern and central Soviet armies.

Of this action, which extended as far south as Volchansk, the post-midnight communique said:

"During July 3, in the Kursk direction, our troops repulsed big and fierce tank attacks of the German Fascist troops. The enemy is suffering enormous losses. In one day's fighting the enemy lost over 250 tanks and 15,000 officers and men killed.

"In the Belgorod-Volchansk direction our troops repelled enemy attacks."

Volchansk is 100 miles south of Kursk, and a supplementary bulletin said the 200 German tanks crashed against Soviet positions there at the point nearest Voronezh Province, guardian of the upper Caucasus.

Dozens of Nazi tanks were left burning in no-man's-land when the Germans retreated to their original positions, the communique said.

paper Allehanda, who cited Rome dispatches.

[The British declined to comment.

[In Bern, reliable informed sources said they thought the presence of American troops on the Egyptian front was "possible and logical."

[American technical advisers and observers have been on the African front for some time and it was said that it would be natural for some troops to be with the equipment shipped to the Middle East.

[It was recalled that Havas, the French News Agency, some weeks ago reported American troop transports had halted in Gibraltar but it was not known then whether they would remain.

[While it was never officially confirmed, it would be possible, if these transports actually were at Gibraltar, to continue to the African front.]

Unofficially, the success of the British was attributed to arrival of promised reinforcements, and Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck's crafty encircling attack on Rommel's rear. He struck when the Axis was using its customary tactic of attacking with the slanting rays of the setting sun in the opposition's eyes.

In addition to these factors, the British hope of eventually saving Egypt and the Middle East was pinned on the facts that Rommel's supply lines, ever harassed by American and British planes, are weakened by extreme length, and that the Axis has come into tight quarters in the corridor between Qattara and the sea where long-planned British maneuvers may be put into practice.

The fighting yesterday took place on the northern sector and was thus confined to a small area. There were no indications that Rommel might try to solve the problem of traversing the supposedly impassable Qattara salt sink south of El Alamein, or even to skirt its northern edge.

In the prelude to the fighting today, the Royal and South African Air Forces and the American Army Corps struck heavily at the enemy's immediate rear, and attacked vital ports through which Rommel might receive supplies and reinforcements.

In the daytime struggles R. A. F. fighters and fighter-bombers shuttled over the land forces, giving invaluable backing to the defenders, who turned to the offensive against enemy concentrations.

R. A. F. pilots reported some of the largest fires were started in the desert by British night bombers in their chain attack on enemy positions.

Enemy air activity was on the upgrade in the all out effort to take El Alamein, but not on an alarming scale.

British official circles praised highly the cooperation of the Egyptian government and people and all thought of fifth column activity on a dangerous scale has been dispelled.

(A German broadcast Friday said the German and Italian governments had published "a solemn declaration stating that they will respect and insure the independence and sovereignity of Egypt." (This is a familiar device in German propaganda and diplomacy designed to lull a prospective victim into believing it will become a partner rather than a vassal of the Axis).

Air Force Gets Equal Voice

Royal R. Ingersoll, 2d, was recently reported killed in action in the Pacific area.

The Navy said that Admiral Hart will be retained in active service as a retired officer, with the rank of full admiral. He reached the statutory age limit more than a year ago.

The appointment of Gen. Wilson as an Assistant Chief of Staff, gives Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, three air and three ground officers as his chief aides.

Lieut. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, a veteran airman, is Deputy Chief of Staff, while Brig. Gen. Idwal H. Edwards, also a flier, is Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3. Maj. Gen. George V. Strong, G-2, and Brig. Gen. Raymond G. Moses, G-4, are the other two ground soldier Assistant Chiefs of Staff.

The new assistant chief of staff for operations is a Field Artilleryman. During the last war, he saw action with the Maryland National Guard. He is a graduate of Virginia Military Institute, and at one time was an instructor at the Naval War College, an experience which should aid him in planning joint operations with the Navy.

Secretary Stimson also announced the creation of a new post—Chief Surgeon of the Army Air Forces—and the assignment of Brig. Gen. David N. W. Grant of the Medical Corps to fill it. Grant, a flight surgeon, has been serving in the Office of the Commanding General of the Army Air Forces as Air Surgeon.

Stimson at the same time disclosed the assignment of four Army officers to command new divisions to be organized in September. They are: Ninety-fourth Division, Brig. Gen. Harry J. Malony; Ninety-eighth Division, Brig. Gen. Paul L. Ransom; 102nd Division, Brig. Gen. John B. Anderson; 104th Division, Brig. Gen. Gilbert R. Cook.

holiday produces the favorable time factor for an Axis attack or sabotage activity," he stated.

"Let us not be caught napping because of fear that someone may accuse us of crying 'wolf, wolf.' Remember that it is far better to be prepared time and again unnecessarily than to be unprepared once," he said.

Railroads and bus lines said yesterday that heavy weekend travel was expected—which means little more to them now than any other weekend when all facilities are taxed as a normal wartime routine. But among those leaving the city today won't be Government workers in war agencies or war workers at benches and machines in the shops here. War Production Board Chairman Donald Nelson has reminded them that soldiers at the front would not expect a holiday.

All citizens were asked yesterday to "dispense with needless travel" in a statement issued by Joseph B. Eastman, defense transportation director.

Not Easy to Ask

"Those who plan motor trips should bear in mind that their automobiles and tires will probably have to last for the duration," he cautioned, with an aside that it wasn't easy for him to ask people to forego such an American custom as a Fourth of July trip. "However, most people know that wartime conditions have placed heavy traffic burdens on railroads and bus lines and they know that we are faced with a critical shortage of rubber," he added.

Police officials drew out the dusty dog-eared memorandum reminding of the law against the shooting of explosive fireworks and their sale in the District. State-wide Maryland law clamps a similar prohibition. Local law in nearby Arlington and Fairfax Counties, Va., follows along.

The Capital will remember the day with some oratory before prearranged small crowds. Representative John M. Robsion (Republican) of Kentucky will address the Association of the Oldest Inshabitants at exercises beginning at 11 a. m. in Old Union Engine House, Nineteenth and H Streets Northwest.

General Cox to Speak

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, provost marshal of the District, will speak at 10:30 a. m. at the unveiling of a plaque bearing the names of 252 employes of the Potomac Electric Power Co. who have entered the armed services. The ceremony, with James H. Ferry, Pepco vice president, presiding, will be held in the lobby of the building at Tenth and E Streets Northwest. A brief talk will be made by Heywood N. Saunders, commander, District Department, American Legion. The Pepco Glee Club will sing.

Lieut. W. S. Hatch will preside at the swearing in of about 75 District Navy recruits in mass induction exercises at 10:30 a. m. today at 1320 G Street Northwest, Navy recruiting station. Similar programs will be held throughout the Nation.

Boy Scouts of the Redskin, Rising Sun and Thirteenth Divisions, which yesterday began a two-day program in observance of the Fourth, will hold field events today from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. in the Eastern High School Stadium.

To Present American Flag

The Washington General Assembly, Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, will present a large American flag to Georgetown University Hospital at noon. The presentation will be made by J. Fred Brady, officer in the organization. The flag will be blessed by the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of the university. Mrs. Wallace M. Yater, president of the hospital ladies' board, will accept the gift.

The Children's Museum, 4215 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, will sponsor a showing of "Youth Takes to Wings," sound movie dedicated to air-minded young Americans, at 8 p. m. in the museum garden.

The Public Library, Eighth and K Streets Northwest, and all branches in its system will be closed for the day, it was announced by Miss Clara W. Herbert, the librarian.

In a "good neighbor" gesture, Ecuador, Cuba and Argentina prepared to observe this Nation's Independence Day with parades and special exercises. The Argentine Chamber of Deputies voted to cable greetings to the United States House of Representatives on the anniversary of North American independence.

Red Cross Issues Urgent Call for More Volunteers

An urgent call for volunteers to fold surgical dressings for wartime use was issued yesterday by Mrs. Brown Harbold, chairman of the District Red Cross war relief surgical dressings committee, who has received an unprecedented quota from the Army.

Although the exact figures on the new quotas are confidential, chapter officials said the request for surgical dressings is the largest in Red Cross history, making it imperative that hundreds of new volunteers be recruited at once.

Surgical dressings are made at Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Mrs. Harbold said there was still room for more workers in some of the units already operating every day and every night except Friday afternoon, Saturday and Sunday. If anyone is interested in organizing a separate unit with as many as 60 workers in it, she said, special arrangements can be made to make the surgical dressing rooms available Friday afternoon, evening or any time Saturday.

Volunteers need not purchase special uniforms. White dresses or white coveralls will be acceptable, Mrs. Harbold said. Volunteers should call Hobart 6800, extension 4, to make arrangements.

Farm, Food Appeal Taken To People

be free to use its feed resources to produce food for the wartime effort," the President said yesterday in his letter.

He said the Senate farm security appropriations, while inadequate, were "infinitely better than the inadequate proposals that are being mistakenly urged on the Congress by certain selfish and power-hungry groups.

"The approval of the Senate recommendations on the Farm Security Administration program are in my judgment essential to the Nation's war effort. They are minimum."

Representative Clarence Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri, chairman of the President's letter, failed to budge from the House stand for parity sales.

"Principle of Parity"

"The only real issue," Mr. Cannon replied, "is whether the principle of parity guaranteed the farmer by legislation will be maintained.

"The farmer is producing a greater amount of foodstuffs than ever before in the history of the Nation and at a cost which is the lowest percentage of consumer income ever paid by the consumer for food in the history of America."

Representative Dirksen (Republican) of Illinois, a conferee, who voted with Mr. Cannon against subparity wheat sales, said the President's letter was an "over-simplification" of the problem.

The President in his letter did not identify the "pressure group" referred to. On parity and "economy" issues, the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Grange have supported the House bill. The Farmers Union has opposed the House bill and supported the Senate provisions acceptable to the President.

Patton Was Signer

James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, was one of the seven signers of the joint letter to the President. Murray Lincoln of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation was another signer, but the dominant Illinois branch of the Farm Bureau Federation long since broke with the Administration on its farm policy. Earl Smith of the Illinois branch, which largely influences federation policies, has been reported actively supporting the position of the House conferees, as against the Administration's position. Smith was not a signer.

Text of President's Letter on Farm Problem

The text of President Roosevelt's letter yesterday on sale of Government-owned grain surpluses at less than parity prices follows:

In these dark days when the fortunes of war demonstrate more clearly than ever before the dependence of our fighting men upon adequate supplies, it is heartening to receive the letter of June 20 signed by you and six other leaders of farm, labor and religious organizations asking help in giving all our farmers the equipment with which to produce enough food for victory and a peace that will endure.

The seven signatures on this joint appeal spell a new understanding and a new unity, born of war, among farmers, all three national labor organizations, and two great religious groups of men and women of good will. Our fighting men need this kind of unity in support of them. As their commander in chief, I welcome it.

Authorization Essential

The authorization to sell some of the Government's holdings of grain for feeding purposes at 85 per cent of the parity price for corn is essential if the armed services and the civilian population are to be assured adequate supplies of pork, beef, milk, chicken, and eggs at prices that will neither break through the ceiling nor require excessive subsidies. The Government will continue to assure fair prices to farmers for their products. Certainly, the Government organized for total war must have the authority to deploy its resources promptly and in sufficient volume to speed victory. We have surpluses of grains; we have oncoming stringencies and shortages in certain meats, fats and oils.

The only real issue involved here is whether the Government should be free to use its feed resources to produce food for the wartime effort. When this fact becomes clear, I am certain that pressure group tactics will not prevail and that the action taken by the Congress will reflect the Nation's needs.

To meet the Nation's war food goals, we must have the full time employment of all farmers, big and little. I agree with your statement that they, as working farmers tilling their own land, should be given such support as is necessary to utilize their resources fully. They must be assisted to stay on the land and to have or to get a life's stake in it.

They Are Minimum

This, the Senate recommendations for Farm Security Administration loan authorizations and appropriations, will do in a measure that, however inadequate, is infinitely better than the inadequate proposals that are being mistakingly urged on the Congress by certain selfish and power hungry groups. The approval of the Senate recommendations on the Farm Security Administration program are, in my judgment, essential to the Nation's war effort. They are minimum. Quite properly, billions have been allocated for the financing of war industry, large and small. Similar balanced aid to make full use for war of our varied farm resources should not be denied.

You have asked me to take this issue to the country. I think that your excellent letter has done this in large measure. I will support and emphasize it at every opportunity. Should resistance to these proposals persist, I am confident that the people will hold those responsible to strict account.

THE EKLUND GUN

attempted to dupe the police into believing a mysterious "sniper" was still at large.

According to Harlow's testimony, Eklund had asked him what the effect on his case would be if a man were to shoot a Negro with bullets that bore the same ballistic markings as ones that were found in the body of another man. Harlow said he had answered that it would "confuse" the case.

Eklund then said, it was testified, that he could "arrange it." Harlow went on to relate that Eklund told him where he could find a gun, and that Eklund drew a map of a section of a Baltimore park, marking a spot near some shrubbery.

At this point, Eklund jumped from his chair and cried:

"That's ridiculous!"

The prosecution introduced into evidence Thursday a rusted revolver that police testified was unearthed in Baltimore's Preston Gardens Park on information supplied by Harlow.

Another part of the scheme, Harlow said, was to send a number of notes to the publisher of The Washington Post. Harlow quoted Eklund as saying that such notes, prepared so that they were identical in form to previous notes sent to The Post in 1940, could help in impressing police that he was innocent. Eklund was arrested in November of 1940 and charged with the slaying of McClaine.

At one point in the testimony, as Harlow paused to recollect part of another conversation between the two, Eklund interjected:

"Why don't you make up your mind? It looks like we're going to have another perjury like in the last trial."

Eklund was convicted more than a year ago of first-degree murder, but won a new trial on the discovery that a star Government witness had testified falsely.

Seeking to attack Harlow's testimony, Whelan asked the witness in cross-examination whether he was testifying against Eklund so that the court would "go easier" on him when his own case came to trial. Harlow admitted this without hesitation.

"On May 11, 1942," asked Whelan, "did you not state to Haynes (another District Jail inmate) that you knew much of the Eklund case from your reading and discussion of it during the last trial? And that you would just as soon frame Eklund if it could help you in any way?"

"I certainly did not," responded Harlow.

"You deny it?"

"I emphatically deny it."

home to him and his dog.

"Sorry," he said to me, curtly.

"But I'm so sorry for you," I exclaimed, "your ship."

But she wasn't sinking.

We were all afraid that the submarine would return and finish the job. But we had sent an S O S, and two planes came zooming out of the darkness and dived down over the lifeboats. The captain flashed his pocket lamp and they turned on their lights to show they saw us.

How does it feel to be in a lifeboat? After a few uneasy moments, I was calm. It was a lovely night, warm and bright; we had extra sweaters aboard, and chocolate and crackers. The crew chatted with the captain in Norwegian and we yawned and tried to doze. But lifeboat seats are not meant for sleeping on.

Gradually the stars paled and the sun came up. An Army bomber came and circled the ship, which was still there. There came to me an indescribable feeling of peace and happiness. I knew without a doubt that we would be saved.

We were, and so was the ship, with its valuable load of copper and tin from the Belgian Congo. But to tell how, when and where might give away Navy secrets.

We were among the lucky ones, for in that section of the ocean the water is often covered with oil and more than one body has been washed on shore.

13 Ships Sunk, One by U-Boat While in Costa Rican Harbor

It was chartered by the United Fruit Co.

The port had been blacked out several nights. Its waterfront is on the Caribbean, in which Axis submarines have been taking an alarming toll of Allied ships for weeks.

Closest Attack to Canal

The attack at 8 p. m. was by far the closest to the vital canal. The nearest attacks previously announced were 700 miles to the northeast where tankers were sunk at the Dutch island of Aruba off South America's north coast. Refineries there were shelled twice without damage.

Some officials commented that the submarine must have been informed from shore of the presence of the San Pablo, possibly by confederates of the spy ring.

British Seamen Burn To Death in Their Bunks

A Gulf Coast Port, July 3 (AP).—Most of the British seamen aboard a medium sized British cargo ship were burned to death in their bunks or in lifeboats when two torpedoes from a submarine touched off violent explosions and fire that took 33 of 47 lives in the Gulf of Mexico June 29.

Fourteen survivors who managed to get clear in one lifeboat were brought to port the following morning, according to an announcement by the Eighth Naval District here today. The other two lifeboats with their occupants were caught in flames and destroyed.

Capt. Hugh Bradford Bently, the master of Bristol, England, reported that the ship was moving too fast to permit launching lifeboats as she was hit.

21 Crewmen of 35 Lose Lives at Sea

A Gulf Coast Port, July 3 (AP).—Twenty-one of 35 crew members of a small, unarmed Latvian ship lost their lives June 14 when the vessel was hit by two torpedoes in the Caribbean and sank less than a minute after the boilers exploded.

The Eighth Naval District which announced the sinking said a ship was proceeding in the opposite direction in sight of the stricken vessel but was unable to stop because of the danger and was not attacked.

D. C. Dealers Fear Price War Under New Gasoline System

their jobs in the Martin bomber plant there.

Automobiles are not expected to disappear from Washington streets over the weekend, however, because many motorists undoubtedly have taken the precaution of "filling up" in advance, Wainwright pointed out.

Motorists are scheduled to start registering for gasoline coupons on July 9 at District schools. These coupons, which will become effective on July 22, will entitle motorists to gasoline. The dealers would then turn in coupons to their wholesalers to get additional gasoline to replenish their tanks.

Under a plan tentatively approved by OPA, the 50 per cent limitation order would be formally raised, it was learned. The only restraint on a dealer's supply would then be the number of coupons he could secure from customers. At the same time, the need to have coupons to get new supplies of gas would effectively prevent dealers from selling to people without ration books.

To raise the limitation order, OPA would have to obtain the approval of the War Production Board. Aside from the dealers' objections, some objections are also expected from Interior Secretary Ickes' Office of Petroleum Coordinator. Ickes is reported asking that the 50 per cent limitation be retained as a more certain way of curtailing consumption than dealer coupon rationing.

Following the meeting with Dean, Herzog, acting as spokesman for the dealers, reported that the conferences would resume in Washington on Tuesday or Wednesday to give the dealers time to study several proposals advanced by OPA. The dealers also submitted a proposal to OPA. Both OPA and the dealers declined to reveal the nature of any of these proposals, but it was learned that they are designed to guarantee all dealers a steady supply of gasoline while retaining some form of coupon rationing of dealers.

"We are concerned that no one be put out of business," Herzog said. "A price war is one factor which inevitably enters into any discussion of dealer rationing. If the limitations are removed in toto, the price war element enters in."

Attending the meeting in addition to Herzog, Wainwright and Dean were dealer representatives from New York City, Philadelphia, Boston, New London, Conn.; Passaic, N. J.; Hackensack, N. J., and Babylon, N. Y.

Definitely "not discussed" was the question of securing an additional supply of gasoline to tide the Eastern area over until the new system starts, Herzog said. This question will be raised with the petroleum coordinator sometime next week, he declared.

R.A.F. Sows Fires In Bremen; Fourth Raid in Week

London, July 3 (AP).—British and Canadian pilots left the German U-boat nest of Bremen a patchwork of flame early today after the fourth powerful attack in a week.

At the cost of 13 aircraft the city was bombed in fine night weather and pilots' reports termed the result "the most satisfying" of any of the four assaults.

One German night fighter was downed by Canadian gunners.

Simultaneous raids were made by lighter forces on air fields in the Low Countries and on shipping off the Netherlands coast.

'Make Offer' On Funds Cut, OPA Chief Told

of price control, because at any time the OPA could go back for additional funds, it was said.

In checking over the entire proposed OPA organization, subcommittee members were understood to have given particular attention to Henderson's legal and inspection setups.

Following the hearing Henderson told reporters he had advised the committee that the present danger of inflation was greater than ever before.

Expected Huge Savings

Henderson indicated that he had sought to show the subcommittee that the 161 million for OPA would pay for itself many times through the savings obtained for the Nation by price control on the costs of the victory war program.

The Nation stands to save 62 billion dollars on the cost of the war program alone during the next 20 months, he said.

On the basis of a comparison with America's world war experience with rising prices, Henderson said that price controls had already saved the Nation about six billion dollars on the war program.

Of this total, he said, 260 million dollars had been saved on copper purchases, and another 200 million dollars had been saved on steel. Over the next 20 months, savings on these two items through price control would amount to at least five billion dollars, he said.

Henderson cited the recent $42,-800,000,00 Congressional appropriation for the Army as one of the forces tending to boost inflation.

"Snubs" Explained Away

On one grievance raised the day before, Henderson yesterday was reported to have completely satisfied committee members. This was the question of why his office had failed to answer the letters of inquiry sent there by Congressmen for themselves and for their constituents.

While the nature of Henderson's explanation was not told, committee members said they were satisfied that the reported failures to answer letters were "unavoidable" slipups, of the kind that might happen in any new and large organization.

Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, chairman of the subcommittee, said that while the word politics "was not mentioned," the group had questioned Henderson closely about the manner of selecting attorneys, and other employes, for jobs in the OPA.

Members indicated they were satisfied with Henderson's explanation of selection methods, and McKellar pointed out that all the employes who had been hired in the OPA legal division had been approved by the Justice Department.

"—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth."

—ABRAHAM LINCOLN
The Gettysburg Address, November 19, 1863.

July 4th, 1942—Today, the immortal words of Abraham Lincoln burn with renewed intensity in the hearts of all Americans. There has been brought upon the free peoples of the world a scourge the like of which has never before been thrust upon them. It must be destroyed! Complete victory is inevitable. That is the will and spirit of Americans!

Today, we do honor to the men of our Company who fight beneath Old Glory in the far and near corners of the earth. We who remain behind salute their courage and bravery and pray for their safe and speedy return when they have completed their appointed sacred trust. We have no fear. We shall not falter in our abiding faith in them or our country. Until they come back to us, God bless them.

Cops-and-Robbers Theme Goes Slapstick at Earle

'Larceny, Inc.,' Starring Edward G. Robinson, With Able Cast, Is Well on the Screwy Side; Roy Rogers Headlines 'Wild West' Stage Revue

"LARCENY, INC." Warner Brothers picturization of a play by Laura and S. J. Perelman, adapted to the screen by Everett Freeman and Edwin Gilbert starring Edward G. Robinson, with Jane Wyman, Broderick Crawford, Jack Carson, Anthony Quinn, Edward Brophy, Harry Davenport, John Qualen, Barbara Jo Allen, Grant Mithell, Jackie C. Gleason, Andrew Tombes, Joseph Downing, George Meeker, Fortunio Bonanova, Joseph Crehan, Jean Ames, William B. Davidson, Chester Clute and Creighton Hale. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. At the Earle Theater.

"LARCENCY, INC.," the Warner Brothers' cockeyed little number being presented as the holiday screen attraction at the Earle Theater, is "Little Caesar" gone slapstick.

Fortunately, Edward G. Robinson is one of those rarely gifted actors whose flexible talents can be twisted into as close a likeness of a competent clown as two-gun killer out for blood. In his present vehicle, he is out for laughs and gets them in profusion through the medium of a superabundance of rough-and-tumble action, ranging from comedy falls to punctured water mains and spouting oil tanks, when what they are drilling for is a bank vault. It is as if Mack Sennett had joined hands with W. R. Burnett, or the Epstein boys, in tossing off the script.

Mr. Robinson, in the guise of one "Pressure" Maxwell, is still preoccupied with the get-rich-quick formula made famous by George Randolph Chester's Mr. Wallingford. Fresh out of Sing Sing, with his dim-witted underling, "Jug" Martin, he is promptly joined by his adopted daughter and "Weepy" Davis, who has "gone straight" in the shadowy marts of trade as a prosperous fur merchant, who sells "hot" silver fox neck pieces for the profitable price of $4 per copy!

Intent upon becoming "merchant princes" over night, the Messrs. Pressure, Jug and Weepy set themselves up in the luggage business conveniently next door to a bank. A little tunneling through the basement walls ought to make leather goods richly remunerative! But in his anxiety to put up a convincing "front," Mr. Maxwell becomes slightly involved with the high-voltage salesmanship whipped up by a peppery young drummer and his own ostensible daughter. By reason of his success in overcoming a few municipal impediments to the progress of his "business venture," Mr. Maxwell also becomes the hero of a side street business community that has been dying slowly on its feet. The experience is so novel, he decides really to go straight and no kidding.

It is then that the former jailmate, who had tipped him off to the papier mache bank vaults, puts in his appearance and things truly begin to get thick. When last seen, Mr. Maxwell, Mr. Martin and Mr. Davis are hot-footing it around the corner, one leap ahead of "the law"!

In fashioning this farcial version of the play by Laura and S. J. Perelman, Scenarists Everett Freeman and Edwin Gilbert threw the whole book of comedy gags at the plot. Most of them are effectively utilized and some of them are pretty sloppy—both literally and figuratively—especially that tunneling into the water pipes and the furnace oil tanks. Maxwell is made a volcanic little fellow with a grandiose vocabulary and a fine capacity for blundering into trouble. Mr. Robinson plays him dynamically and amusingly. As Jug and Weepy, Broderick Crawford and Ed Brophy, respectively, discharge most of the "dirty work" and are the mainsprings of the picture's rowdy hilarity. Jack Carson is a verbose and volatile salesman and Jane Wyman an effective decoration in the comparatively minor role of the moll in the case. The genstitive and sentimental Anthony Quinn, who happens to be able to look amazingly like a blood-thirsty criminal, is the case-hardened thug, who heaves the final monkey wrench. Harry Davenport, John Qualen, Barbara Jo Allen (Vera Vague to you dial-twisters), Grant Mitchell, Andrew Tombes, Joseph Crehan, William B. Davidson and the almost-forgotten Creighton Hale, in the merest of "bits," are among the other able players cast in roles in no sense commensurate with their abilities.

The Stage Revue Goes "Wild and Woolly"

Out of deference to Headliner Roy Rogers and his "Sons of the Purple Sage" instrumentalists, Harry Anger has rigged up his new stage revue in chaps and Indian feathers to create the atmosphere of a "dude" frontier. Republic's Rogers proved himself a glib, literate and genial young singing cowboy, who can yodel a sentimental or comic ballad with the best of them, to his own guitar accompaniment. He scored a solid hit at yesterday's first performance. So did Trigger, his Palomino high school horse, seemingly as intelligent as he is handsome. And so did the "Sons of the Purple Sage," with their guitar, accordion, bass viol and banjo combination, their bull-whip cracking and Eddie Howard's banjo solo numbers. But before that, Rollo and Verna Pickert, all dressed up in cowboy suits and sombreros, had executed their unique high-stilt dance routines, and Nash and Evans, in their spotless white buckskins, had gone through their familiar lariat-dance-and-chatter act. The Roxyettes, betimes, are in and out, with everything from dummy cowboys to spectacular Sioux war bonnets. All very diverting, spirited and yippee-e-e!

Except for the inevitable string of house and Treasury Department trailers, a brief issue of the newsreel is the only screen auxiliary of a bill successfully devised to conform to the flippant spirit of holiday fun, frolic and foolishness.

It Could Be Larceny, at That!

EDWARD G. ROBINSON AND JANE WYMAN
each wearing a smile like the cat that just swallowed the canary, in "Larceny, Inc.," the Warner Brothers' item now on the screen at the Earle Theater. Others of importance in this revival of the "Little Caesar" motif include Broderick Crawford, Jack Carson, Anthony Quinn, Edward Brophy, Harry Davenport and Barbara Jo Allen, not forgetting John Qualen, Grant Mitchell, Andrew Tombes and George Meeker. Quite a cast

By Ernest L. Schier.

"SERGEANT YORK" Jesse L. Lasky's picturization for Warner Brothers of a screen play by Abem Finkel, Harry Chandlee, Howard Koch and John Huston, based on the life and diary of Sergt. Alvin C. York, starring Gary Cooper, with Walter Brennan, Joan Leslie, George Tobias, Stanley Ridges, Margaret Wycherly, Ward Bond, Noah Beery, jr., June Lockhart, Dickie Moore, Clem Bevans, Howard da Silva, Charles Trowbridge, Harvey Stephens, David Bruce, Charles Esmond, Joseph Sawyer, Pat Flaherty, Robert Porterfield and Erville Alderson. Directed by Howard Hawks. At the Metropolitan Theater for the first time at popular prices.

Originally released before the event of Pearl Harbor, "Sergeant York," played currently at the Metropolitan, was a wonderful argument against isolationism and all those who wanted to ignore the impending world situation by emulating the ostrich and sticking their heads in the sand, exposing to attack more vulnerable targets. As viewed today, it is still a great picture with a definite moral for moviegoers.

Making its first local appearance at popular prices, "Sergeant York" tells with simple eloquence the story of a man of peace who sacrificed his pacifism to fight wholeheartedly for something which he believed worth keeping. The story is based on the life of Alvin C. York, portrayed on the screen by Gary Cooper. Contrary to the popular belief of those who haven't already viewed this film, the greater part of the footage is devoted to the transition of Sergeant York from a peace-loving, church-going man to a crusader, with a deep-seated conviction to fight for. The small remainder is given over to the heroic acts which made him the No. 1 hero of World War I.

Born and bred in the back hills of Tennessee, Alvin York was a hell-raising, shooting, drinking son of the earth. His reputation for fighting and brawling caused shutters to close and doors to be locked whenever he made his appearance, despite the pleas of his mother and the local pastor, he remained adamant in his refusal to embrace the church and give up his lawless ways until one night the hand of God, in the form of a bolt of lightning, struck his rifle from him. From that day forth, York became the community example of a sober, hard working man.

In the midst of his efforts to win a piece of low, level farmland for himself and his betrothed, the first World War began. Unable to understand the necessity for fighting against men he didn't even know, York opposed the draft and registered as a conscientous objector. Conscripted against his will, it took the combined efforts of Pastor Pile and his senior officers, who saw much in him to be admired, to convince him that the time for peace had ended and the need for defending the land he loved was at hand. With this conviction York set forth to win the acclaim of the Nation.

Sergeant York is portrayed by Cooper with a simpleness and conviction that won even the approval of the real Alvin York. Joan Leslie is ideally cast as his one and only love. His mother is played by Margaret Wycherly, of stage fame, whose love and tenderness served as his inspiration. Another notable performance is given by that rascally scene-stealer, Walter Brennan as the head of the community church. The photography is something wonderful to behold. Supporting performances are excellent and combine with the direction to weld the whole film into one of near perfection.

Toomey Plays in Historical Picture

To Regis Toomey goes a rich role in "The Man On America's Conscience."

He plays a young Tennessee patriot who becomes the staunch ally and personal friend to President Andrew Johnson, championing the statesman in and out of a dozen scrapes.

Van Heflin plays Johnson, with Lionel Barrymore as the vitriolic Thad Stevens, the man responsible for the impeachment proceedings against the President.

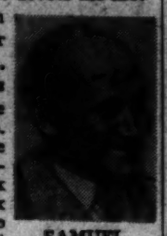
Broadway Glossary

New York, July 3.

REASON: Harold Clurman, the director-producer who founded the Group Theater in New York, now has become a successful Hollywood executive. He was brought to the film colony by Darryl Zanuck, who instructed him to devote the first six months of his stay to learning the motion picture business. "We want to make another Mark Hellinger out of you," he was told . . . Clurman applied himself studiously, drew his weekly pay check, and at the end of three months, asked for a film assignment. "No. Keep on learning the business for three months," were the instructions to him. "Remember—we're going to make another Mark Hellinger out of you" . . . At the end of the six months' period, when Clurman was ready to start work, the studio released him. "But why?" he asked. "Weren't you planning to make another Hellinger out of me?" . . . "That's just it," was the explanation. "We've just signed Hellinger."



SAMUEL GOLDWYN

SUCCESS: Last night a Broadway fairy tale became fact—the tale of the chorus girl who steps into a part and then gets a film contract . . . Irene Corlett, who is featured in "By Jupiter," was rushed to a hospital. Ruth Brady spent the weekend studying the Corlett role, and rehearsing it with Benny Venuta. On Monday afternoon the stage manager assembled the girls, and asked if any of them knew the Corlett lines . . . "I know them," Miss Brady volunteered. That night she was given the role. Yesterday Ruth Brady was signed by Twentieth Century-Fox.

TECHNIQUE: The story is being told of a wounded Nazi soldier who was returned to Berlin for treatment. He went to the hospital where he saw two doors. One sign read "Officers," the other "Troops." He walked through the "Troops" door, and was confronted by two other doors—"Seriously Wounded" and "Partly Wounded." He walked through the latter door, and again discovered two doors. This time the signs read "Party Members" and "Non Party Members." He entered the "Non Party Members" door—and found that he was out in the street again. He reported to his family: "I got no treatment for my wounds—but the organization's sure was perfect."*

NAME: Libby Block is the writer whose articles have been appearing in Red Book, Cosmopolitan and the Saturday Evening Post. She's married to a man named Cohen . . . Another Libby Block, whose magazine articles are published in England, also is married to a man named Cohen . . . The ladies arranged to meet, and perhaps toss a coin to determine which one would keep, and which would abandon, the writing name "Libby Block." They met at the appointed place. Each had brought a girl friend. And both those friends were named "Stone."

CONFESSION: Sam Goldwyn, who will arrive here next week, was discussing the common reluctance to admit error. "Here's the way I look at it," Goldwyn announced. "It takes a big man to admit that he's always wrong."

CHATTER: W. H. Auden, the poet, joins the Army this week . . . Major de Seversky, author of "Victory Through Air Power," will reply to the Fortune article about him in a novel method— paid ads . . . Maury Paul, the society columnist, lost 40 pounds in a weight-reducing program—and now is in an oxygen tent . . . The Russian aviator who flew Molotov to this country was only 23 years old. The President asked to see him, to bestow personal congratulations . . . The Metropolitan Opera Co. will alter its traditional system of presenting its annual Financial Statement . . . Elsa Maxwell, who is writing a column, conducting a weekly radio program, and attending parties, managed to find time to write a play. Helen Hayes is reading it now.

RETURN: The British in Egypt relate this incident—of General Rommel's stopping to borrow a razor from an Italian vendor in Africa. "I left mine back in my tent," Rommel told him . . . "Oh, that's all right. You'll give it back to me later," said the Italian . . . "Are you sure?" asked Rommel . . . "Well," replied the Italian, "last year you took Bir Hacheim, but you gave it back. Then you took Benghasi, but you gave it back. And then you took Bardia, and gave it back . . . So I'm sure."

GREETING: Shortly after Admiral Stark arrived in London, the ministry of information invited him to visit their office and he accepted. The ministry borrowed a platoon of United States Marines, borrowed an American flag from the embassy, and assigned Jack Brebner, head of the ministry's news section to welcome him . . . At the appointed hour a car drew up to the curb and out stepped Admiral Stark, in full uniform. "Welcome," said Brebner. "I'm Brebner. I'm with the ministry of information" . . . The gold-braided admiral extended his hand. "I'm Stark," he returned. "I'm with the United States Navy."

—HEDDA HOPPER—

"Loneliest Man in the World"

Hollywood, Calif., July 3.—House for Sale—Clark Gable's, I drove out to see Clark the other day, and if every American zippered his lip like Clark, none of our secrets would ever reach the enemy. All he could say was, "Hedda, I went to New York, saw insurance people. I'm settling up Carole's estate, then on to Washington, where I put in my application, took my physical exam., and now I'm awaiting orders. Outside of that, I can say nothing."

CLARK GABLE

I've never seen him look better. He's had many offers for the house. Said he, "Naturally, I won't give it away. But wherever I look, there are memories of Carole." "But Clark," I said, perhaps after the war is over it may be a haven to come back to. The memory of your own tragedy may be dimmed by then." "I hadn't thought of that," he replied. "Anyway, if it's not sold by the time I leave, I'll just close it up."

And when I said, "Clark, your going into the service has every star in Hollywood wanting to do the same thing," he said, "I? Sorry. I had to do what I believe is right."

And as he stood there, with the sun setting behind the home where he had known such happiness, I thought, "There's a man who's had everything — love, success, glory, and yet, there's the loneliest man in the world."

Anne Shirley's going to have plenty of company when Bubbles Schinasi and Mrs. Bennett Cerf come out as her house guests July 10, which means that John Gunther will be somewhere in the negihborhood. Incidentally, Bubbles saw quite a bit of Arthur Hornblow back East.

Greta Garbo dropped in on Rich Remarque when he kept open house on his birthday, and was chummy as all get-out with the rest of his guests.

Since Metro bought the story "I Escaped From Hongkong," I'd like to be a little bit helpful and suggest that Frank Morgan play it.

Jeane Pierre Aumont, the Frenchman put under contract by Metro, will do "Assignment in Brittany." He was signed in Paris two years ago by Ralph Blum, at the same time he took over Michele Morgan.

First Photos Showing Wasp Malta Bound

SKIPPER WATCHES OPERATIONS—Capt. J. W. Reeves, jr. (in doorway), skipper of the United States aircraft carrier Wasp, visits the air control station as the carrier approaches Malta. He is talking to Lieutenant Commander Shea, air operations officer, and Lieutenant Commander Beakley (right), commander of the Wasp's air group

GOOD PILOT—Commander Dickey (left), executive officer of the Wasp, chats with an R. A. F. officer about the remarkable feat of R. A. F. Pilot S. A. Smith, shown in the cockpit of the Spitfire which he landed on the Wasp without benefit of arresting gear as the carrier rolled over the sea toward Malta. Smith's plane had motor trouble

SIGNAL BRIDGE ALERT—Spotters and signalmen on the signal-bridge of the Wasp stand on the alert for messages from escort vessels and signs of enemy planes as they near Malta. The Wasp made trips to the British Mediterranean stronghold to deliver aerial reinforcements. She carried out the mission without incurring damage and planes which took off from her flight deck downed many enemy aircraft over Malta. These pictures, released today, are the first showing the Wasp in action

Service in Marine's Honor To Mark Independence Day

The spiritual observance of Independence Day will be marked by special services in Washington and nearby churches tomorrow.

Of special note will be the patriotic service in honor of the Marine Corps at Luther Place Memorial Church, Fourteenth and N Streets Northwest, tomorrow at 11 a. m. "Semper Fidelis," motto of the corps, meaning "always faithful," will be the theme of the service.

A number of Marine officers and enlisted men are expected to attend. Lieut. Col. Frank R. Worthington, U. S. M. C., will be a guest speaker. He plans to point out the relationship of the Marine Corps to God as indicated by the motto of the corps. Paymaster Sergt. Martin A. McGrory, prominent Lutheran churchman, will offer a prayer.

Sermon on Like Theme

The Rev. Charles B. Foelsch, pastor, in announcing his sermon topic, which will also be on the theme of the Marine's motto, said he would try to show the necessity in these times to be faithful to self, country and God. Marine instrumentalists and vocalists will take part in the ceremony.

Dedication of American and church flags will lend a patriotic note to the 11 o'clock services at McKendree Methodist Church, Rhode Island and South Dakota Avenues Northeast. Dr. Horace E. Cromer, District superintendent of the Washington Methodist East District, will speak. The Rev. Charles F. Phillips, minister, has chosen "A Man Who Might Have Been" for his sermon topic.

The Rev. Arnold M. Lewis, chaplain of the 176th Infantry, now stationed at Fort Myer, will be the guest preacher at a special service at the Church of the Epiphany, 1317 G Street Northwest, at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Chaplain Lewis was formerly rector of the Church of the Epiphany at West Hampton, Long Island, and has been a reserve chaplain for many years.

National hymns and special prayers will carry through the Independence Day theme, and the regular celebration of the holy communion will be held.

Communion Service

For the benefit of those who work on Sunday, there will be a celebration of holy communion tomorrow at 8 p. m. The Rev. Hunter M. Lewis will be special preacher.

Hand-picked teams from the Army and Navy will meet in a "battle of Biblical brains" tonight at 8 o'clock over Station WWDC. Evangelist Dale Crowley will conduct this special military quiz. Representing the Army will be Sergt. Ralph Nichols, Private Robert Bain and Private Henry Southerland, while the Navy team will be composed of Seamen Sidnor Chichester, Paul Miller and Robert Dawson.

In keeping with Independence Day, a roll call of those serving in the armed forces from Foundry Methodist Church will be read at the 7:45 o'clock service of that church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest. "The True American" will be the subject of an address by Chaplain Charles D. Trexler of the Army Medical Center.

As a part of the Foundry young people's program, Chaplain Charles Beatty, U. S. Marine Corps, will speak on "Service to Service Men" at the 7 o'clock meeting of the Foundry Forge.

Dr. Frederick Brown Harris will preach on "I Am One of Them" at 11 a. m. A joint devotional service in the church-at-study program for adults of the church school will be at 9:45 and at 10 a. m. The three groups will meet separately—Dr. Elgin Groseclose will direct the reading of the scripture; Dr. James H. Phillips will discuss "The Idea of God" before the group studying Understanding the Bible, and Dr. Ludwig Homberger will present "Nazism as I Saw It" before the group on "Christian Values at Work in War and Peace."

American and Christian flags will be presented to the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow. The gift is in recognition of the bowling prowess of the Mount Vernon team which won the championship of the Methodist Bowling League last spring. Howard Stackhouse, president of the league, will make the presentation.

China Mission Fields Facing War Dangers

New York, July 3.—Fighting in China along three major fronts endangers scores of American missionaries in mission stations and hospitals in the path of possible Japanese advances, according to Harper Sibley, chairman of the Church Committee for China Relief.

The largest number of missions facing evacuation or Japanese capture is in Hunan Province, adjacent to Kiangsi Province, and the scene of bitter fighting in the central Yangtze Valley, southwest of Hankow, where the Japanese objective is the Hunan section of the Canton-Hankow railroad.

Located in Hunan Province are 19 mission stations whose relief work is financed partly by the church committee for China Relief through United China Relief. In Changsha, the provincial capital, are important mission and relief projects of the American Episcopal Church, the Presbyterian Church of the U. S. A. and the China Inland Mission, an inter-denominational society with headquarters in Philadelphia. In Changsha there is also the Yale-in-China Hospital which is the keystone in a cooperative medical work involving 22 mission hospitals, both Protestant and Catholic.

In Changteh, where bacteria-infested fleas reputedly were dropped by the Japanese, are mission stations of the Christian and Missionary Alliance of New York and the Presbyterian Church of the U. S. A. At Hengyang, important Chinese railroad junction, the Presbyterians have set up temporary headquarters for all their China missions.

American Baptist missionaries, formerly in Kinhwa, in southern Chekiang Province, evacuated to Kangfeng in Kiangsi Province the latter part of May, and today face another evacuation. Several other missions in Kiangsi Province are in danger of occupation as a result of fighting in northeastern Kiangsi Province, including a Catholic mission in Nanchang supported by Americans at St. Columbans, Nebr.

In Hsuchang are two large camps for war orphans supervised by Lutheran missionaries.

At Yencheng representatives of the China Inland Mission are caring for 1000 women and children.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

On the eve of the Day of Atonement, the melody of this ancient Hebrew prayer rises up in synagogues everywhere to express the deep religious feelings which move the Jewish heart. The music would has come to consider as the most characteristic tune of the Synagogue.

Catholic Guild Tries to Reach 'Man on Street'

Reaching the man on the street is one of the features of the Catholic Evidence Guild park meetings, according to Harry J. Kirk, local president. Beginning each year on Good Friday and continuing until November, it holds Sunday open-air meetings in Franklin and Lincoln Parks and Logan Circle. This is its eleventh season.

"The technique is not to argue, not to make fun of or crack down on anyone else," said Kirk "but to explain Catholic doctrine and practice. Its speakers do not relate personal experiences but confine themselves to an objective presentation of Catholic principles and practices. All speakers invite questions from the crowd and this creates great interest."

The guild has 75 licensed speakers, priests, religious students laymen and laywomen. There are no dues. Besides the open-air meetings it has training classes every week the year round for its speakers. There are in charge of three members of the faculty of Catholic University, the Rev. Dr. Charles Hart, the Rev. Dr. William Russel and the Rev. Dr. John Stafford, C. S. V.. Once a month the members have a communion breakfast

The Rev. Leander Troy will be chairman of the Washington Catholic Evidence Guild meeting in Franklin Park tomorrow from 3 to 5 p. m. Alphonsus Croake will talk on the "Holy Eucharist," Lauretian Doerr, on "Redemption," and the Rev. Gerard Benson on "Miracles."

The Rev. James Caulfield will be guest speaker at the meeting from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. in Franklin Park. The chairman of this meeting will be the Rev. Alonzo McDonnell. He will present Charles Ferry, who will talk on "The Mass." C. G. Klimowicz will speak on "The Catholic Moral System."

In Lincoln Park from 2 to 4 p. m. the Rev. David Murphy will preside. He will introduce Quentin Duncan, whose subject will be "Revelation;" Emmet Gleeson, "The Church;" Roger Tro, "he Idea of a Visible Church," and the Rev. Flavian Wilson, "The Supernatural Life."

This afternoon, in Logan Circle, Harry J. Kirk, president of the guild, will conduct a program.

It was "The Heavenly Race."

During Dr. Briggs' 33 years at Fifth Baptist, 4049 persons have been received into the church, 2356 coming by baptism. Contributions, about one-third of which were given to missions, Christian Education and beneficence, amounted to $700,857.42. Dr. Briggs has aided in organizing several Sunday Schools and churches in greater Washington during the third of a century just past. He has held evangelistic meetings in the District, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and Georgia.

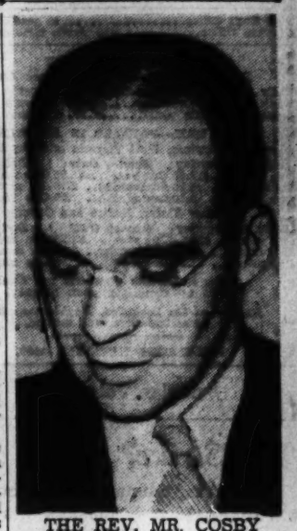
River Road Church Becomes Independent in Five Years

Started Congregation Five Years Ago, Is Now Independent



THE REV. MR. COSBY

The Rev. Virgil M. Cosby, pastor, yesterday announced that the River Road United Presbyterian Church has become independent as of July 1. It stands at River Road, Forty-fifth and Fessenden Streets Northwest.

The River Road Church project was begun more than five years ago by the Board of American Missions, which purchased a lot and erected a chapel, even before a congregation was organized. The Rev. and Mrs. Cosby came as missionaries, and the young people of the denomination underwrote their salary for the first two years.

In April, 1937, the chapel was dedicated and services started. The congregation was formally organized in October, 1937, with 54 charter members. Now there are 300.

In five years the debt on the chapel has been liquidated and a parsonage purchased and $4000 already has been paid off the parsonage debt. Another church unit will be built when building conditions permit.

A daily vacation Bible school is being conducted until July 12. Mr. Cosby will address worship services tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "The Pillars of a Christian Republic."

Cathedral Canon Will Preach

The Rev. W. Curtis Draper, jr., Canon of Washington Cathedral, will preach at the 11 o'clock service in the cathedral tomorrow morning. Holy Communion will be celebrated.

At the 4 o'clock evensong service the Rev. A. L. Ribble will preach as the second in the series of diocesan clergymen to fill the cathedral pulpit during the summer months. The Rev. Mr. Ribble is rector of St. John's Church, Olney; St. Bartholomew's, Laytonsville, and St. Luke's, Brighton.

Beginning with tomorrow's services the summer men's choir will replace the regular cathedral choir of men and boys, and following the afternoon service the cathedral organist and choirmaster, Paul Callaway, will present the regular first-of-the-month organ recital on the great organ of the cathedral.

This week the cathedral begins a new schedule of evening tours for visitors unable to visit the cathedral during the day. During the month of July the church will be open from 7 until 9 o'clock on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, and guided tours will be conducted through the completed portions of the structure, the herb cottage and the curator's office.

Taxi Strike?

Considering the nature of the row that has developed over the new zone rates approved by the Public Utilities Commission, the rehearing promised by the PUC will be very useful. First, it will show how many cab drivers approve the new zones and the higher rates authorized by the PUC and how many disapprove. The indications are to date that, while the cab drivers' union is still toying with the idea of a strike, it speaks for only a minority. The rehearing will give the less vocal drivers an opportunity to make their wishes known.

Secondly, the rehearing will give all interested groups a chance to propose alternative plans. We, along with others, have complained that the new zone rates are complicated and likely to be confusing to the public. To find an ideal system, however, is quite a different matter. Congress has forbidden the PUC to regulate taxicab fares by meters, and in any event meters probably could not be had in wartime. The old zoning system, moreover, is utterly inequitable. In some instances it requires drivers to transport their fares most of the way across the city for 40 cents, while they may charge 80 cents for one-third that distance in other sections. Because of its inequities this system had the effect of driving cabs out of the areas where fares collected would not pay the costs of operation. Indeed, the PUC found that the old rates as a whole were not giving drivers a fair return. To continue such a system would be grossly unfair to the drivers and the public alike.

Has the drivers' union any reasonable alternative proposal? We fear that any zone-rate system that may be adopted will be complicated if it is to be reasonably equitable. For that reason it is well to have a full expression of views from both the drivers and the taxi-riding public. Then, of course, it is possible that through this restudy the PUC itself may find ways of simplifying and improving some aspects of the plan.

In these circumstances the plans of Edwin A. Glenn to proceed next week with a strike vote among taxi drivers are particularly inexcusable. A strike against public authority in time of war could have only one of two outcomes: (1) If the strikers were only a small minority, they could be denied the right to operate cabs on the streets so long as they failed to comply with PUC orders. (2) If the strike should cripple transportation by taxi, the Government could take over the cabs or mobilize the drivers for war duty. This is no time to trifle with public authority in the Nation's Capital, and we do not believe that the great majority of patriotic cab drivers will try to do so.

Egypt's Status

The rapid advance of Marshal Rommel's army across Egypt has brought to the fore one of the most curious anomalies of the war. For, despite the real danger in which the Nile Valley has been placed by recent developments, Egypt continues to cling to the status of a nonbelligerent. She has broken off relations with the Axis powers, but has not declared war on them, and her small but well-trained army of between 20,000 and 40,000 men has not participated in the conflict.

This circumstance tends to reveal the fallacy of the widespread belief that Egypt's status is that of a colony. That was true once. It ceased being true in 1936. That year saw the signing of a treaty under which the full sovereignty of Egypt was recognized by Great Britain, and Egypt in turn recognized the right of the British to protect the Suez Canal until the Egyptians themselves are in a position to take over its defense.

Till recently the danger of an Axis conquest of Egypt seemed remote to the rank and file of Egyptians. It is true that as far back as the fall of 1940 an Italian offensive brought Axis forces inside Egyptian territory and that Alexandria, Suez and other military objectives in Egypt have, from time to time, been bombed by Axis planes. But it was not until the fall of Mersah Matruh the other day, and Rommel's rapid advance toward the Nile delta, that the menace to Egypt became real. In the meantime the Egyptian government and people have by no means remained entirely aloof from the war. If they did not actively engage in the war against Germany and Italy, they did help the British in a great variety of ways.

Nonetheless the fact is now clear that the latest turn of events has placed Egypt in an equivocal position—a position which is not without its elements of danger to the United Nations. For, while the Egyptian government has taken strenuous measures to keep down Fifth Column elements in their country, those elements remain numerous and a potential source of danger. And, regardless of past grievances they may have had against the British—some of them justified, others not—the fact is clear that an Axis victory in Egypt would mean the end of Egyptian independence. That independence the Egyptians can hardly permit to go by default.

Work, Not Words

Today is a day of work for those who were wont to celebrate. Thus there will be a minimum of the speechmaking and festivity which are traditional on Independence Day. That is all to the good. The times are too serious for mere oratory. Our independence is not so secure that we can take time out to celebrate it. It is in the melting pot of the cosmic war upon which we are embarked, and the most appropriate way to observe this Independence Day, therefore, is to strive with might and main to retain that independence intact.

Now the war in which our independence and the independence of the rest of the free world is at stake is entering upon its crucial stage. If we can hold Rommel in Egypt, if we can keep the Red army in being, the situation may soon be ripe when the strength that we can pour into the struggle will be decisive. But if there are many more lost battles, the war may drag on for years. None, of course, can doubt the final outcome. But the sooner this war is over, the sooner we can get back to our days of rejoicing. There will then be none more joyous than Independence Day. For, if happiness derives from contrast, we shall have seen with our own eyes what thraldom really means.

End Of A Tank

Gen. Neil M. Ritchie of the British Eighth Army is not the only general who has been discredited by the Libyan campaign. An American general will join him; in fact, he has already been superseded, though his successor has not yet appeared on the battlefield. This officer is not a man but a machine—to wit, the General Grant, or U. S. Tank M3.

The Germans, and Rommel in particular, must have guffawed when they saw General Grant heave in sight. Here was a tank with a 75-mm. gun mounted on one side and firing in a restricted arc of less than 90 degrees. This was the machine which the British pitted against German tanks with 88-mm. top turret guns firing over the whole circle of 360 degrees. Of course, the General Grant never had a dog's chance. After a short spell of combat duty, the right-hand tread of the tank got worn to tatters as the result of the constant recoil of the 75-mm. gun on that side.

That possibility had been envisaged by the British. But when the British expressed themselves on the subject, they were told that the General Grants had stood up all right in American maneuvers and on American testing grounds in Arizona and New Mexico. The fact, however, is that our Southwestern desert is far different from the Libyan desert. In Libya the sand covers rock, flint and limestone, whereas there is only soft earth and clay in the Southwestern subsoil. Thus the entry of the General Grant into the field of battle was like a cripple entering the ring against a prize fighter.

To make matters worse, the sight was so inadequate that the British could probably have done better with the naked eye. It was merely a piece of glass with crossed wires. Moreover, the British could not even get enough spare parts. The result was that the British in Libya were reduced to what the correspondents call "cannibalization"—a name for the breaking up of brand-new tanks for the provision of essential spares. Many Grants, indeed, never reached the battle line for lack of spares. They were not equipped with the exact amount of spares with which every British-made tank goes into action. And as to the British-made tanks, these were doing duty in Russia, whence they had been consigned under Britain's agreement with Russia. It would be interesting but futile, incidentally, to speculate as to what might have happened if the General Grants had gone to Russia.

So the General Grant has gone to its grave, unwept and unhonored. It is the second type to be discarded. The first was the General Lee, the gun on which was so close to the ground that the gunner would have had difficulty in shooting it at all, let alone in hitting a target. Neither our fighting men nor the British would accept it, and the General Grant was adopted as a compromise. In place of this model is a new tank, the General Sherman, which is now in mass production. It is an up-to-date tank in every way, according to report, and the sight is so graduated and so marked that the gunner can take a bead on an enemy tank. The target, in other words, is a sitting duck. But how well it will be able to stand up against the German tanks remains to be seen. That will, of course, depend upon the men behind and in the machine as well as the machine itself. It is also to be hoped that this tank embodies the combat experience of the men in the field, as well as the tank experts. As we have said before, our ordnance experts have hitherto not been sufficiently cognizant of the necessity of drawing upon up-to-the-minute combat experience.

Union Security

The fact-finding panel set up to investigate the dispute between four "Little Steel" companies and the United Steelworkers of America (C. I. O.) dealt not only with demands for wage increases but with the question of union security. Only the wage demands present a really controversial issue at present, although a short time ago disputes over union security occupied the spotlight. However, the War Labor Board has hit upon a device for protecting labor unions from loss of members without going so far as to grant demands for a union shop.

A series of decisions, differing only in comparatively unimportant details, have provided for so-called union security. That is, workers who belong to a union must remain members of that union in good standing for the duration of the wage contract, but nonunion workers are not compelled to join the union. Neither is a union employe compelled to retain his membership as a condition of employment. In the present case, the panel suggests, indeed, that the maintenance-of-membership clause and the check-off to assure payment of dues shall apply only to employes who are in good standing two weeks, perhaps, after the War Labor Board hands down its rulings. In other words, union members would have ample opportunity to resign if they did not choose to accept the restrictions imposed by the maintenance-of-membership clause.

In the case of the four "Little Steel" companies, the fact-finding report notes that about 30 per cent of all employes have refused to join the union, despite the pressure brought to bear upon them. The industry is, therefore, still regarded as definitely open shop. If the union-security proposals are accepted, there is nothing in the arrangement to compel these outsiders to join the union. However, those employes electing to remain or to become union members must remain members and pay dues in order to retain their jobs under the wage contract.

In peacetimes strong arguments could be advanced against a measure of this sort. But the war has created a new set of conditions calling for protection against union disintegration. Pledged to avoid strikes, the unions have been deprived of one of their chief weapons of coercion, and it is not so easy as formerly to maintain their hold over members. Since the Administration is committed to a system of collective bargaining, it is important to maintain in existence a strong representative employe organization to see that the terms of contracts are carried out. In the opinion of the fact-finding panel, union security makes for maintenance of peaceful relations and enables union officials to devote more time to elimination of grievances and plans for increasing production.

Ban On Gloom

The other day we found the German papers berating the people for their gloom. Apparently the herrenvolk could not get excited about victories on a gnawing stomach. The taking of this or that position did not seem to fill the void as comfortingly as a potato or even a sausage. But even in Germany the people could still remain gloomy. You can't exorcise the moods by fiat, even by Gestapo terrorism. Of course, the Germans could prevent gloom from being exported, and doubtless they do. But theirs is an authoritarian government, which regulates everything that can possibly be regulated, even human mating. And it is seeking to spread the same tyranny over our civilized world.

We have taken up arms against that aggressive tyranny. Our own free way of life is so precious to us that we are determined to extirpate this authoritarianism at its source. Yet we seem to have our copycats right here in the censorship office. An example has been made—by refusing them the use of the mails—of correspondents who write gloomy letters to our neighbors below the Rio Grande about our wartime situation. Ban on gloom? That's a ban on both freedom and good neighborliness, and will be resented as such in South as in North America.

GUERILLAS

We are wind in the wheat, fire over the field,
axe in the forest, bough that drops and sudden shot from leaves

we are the voice without words heard in the heart and also the lips sealed against the knifed question

we are nameless—woman who kissed the child nestles the gun at her cheek, boy who tossed the ball
hurls the grenade—
yet our names are familiar, loved by men everywhere. Against the invader

we are transformed
in single purpose clenched, pitchfork and wrench are weapons in our hands;
our strength moves under the broken land.

Unfair Criticism

For want of a better form of amusement, apparently, some of our fellow-citizens have embraced the pastime of attacking members of Congress. With defeats piling up, a scapegoat is in order. Why not lampoon a Senator, a Congressman?

I am not a member of that august body; I have no intention of running for office, neither am I related to any of them. But I have known some of them and of their work for more than a quarter of a century. I have worked in a number of governmental agencies and for some of America's leading corporations. All of this has given me an opportunity to evaluate men and services.

We take a man out of his office or his shop, the man who is of the same flesh and blood as the rest of us mortals, we send him to Washington and expect him to become overnight a first-rate statesman, a great legislator, a salesman of products, our employment agent and God knows what else. If some farmer way "down in the heart of Texas" wants a new breed of mules, to the Senator in Washington he writes, demanding that he find, buy and ship the mule to him and at the right cost. Some daddy in California has taken a fancy to a big Dane dog and would like to get one for his little boy. To his Congressman he writes for information, but adds a postscript that he would appreciate if the Congressman would buy and ship the Dane to him. We are ourselves fallible, but expect our Senators and Congressmen to be infallible.

We witness year in and year out the failures of the presidents and their aides in the corporations in which we have invested our savings, and we do not demand that their huge salaries—in many instances 10 and 20 times the size of the remunerations we are paying to our Congressional representatives—be lowered or that they be fired.

Is there any wonder that so many outstanding men, outstanding as regards abilities, experience, social-mindedness, etc., refuse to enter public service? There are unworthy members in both houses, to be sure. But how did they get there? If we had given as much time to the questions of electing our representatives as we give to the funnies, to the repetitious radio broadcasts and to many other time-wasting pastimes, we would have less cause to complain against the omissions or commissions of our Congressmen. Peace Without Taxis

What heavenly quiet along the Potomac in the matter of horn blowing during the recent taxi "strike." Also freedom from the daily scurry for self-preservation while these street monopolists were (by vote) upon their good behavior.

While such good things can't last forever, gratitude is due for small blessings all too briefly enjoyed.

Restless Statues

We can all cheer up now. The recent move to salvage the statues and monuments of our national heroes will, in all probability, meet very little opposition. I'll bet old Andy Jackson out in Lafayette Park has just been itching to get into it. I don't understand how he ever sat still this long. He and MacArthur would make a team nobody could beat. V. S. KEMPER.

Undemocratic Capital

Some years ago, while talking with a Congressman's secretary, I expressed the opinion that Washington really ought to have the vote. In effect, he was opposed. His explanation was that people generally did not understand why the District was made voteless. The purpose was to make Washington a model city, free of political corruption, graft, and all such evil influences.

How plausible it all sounded then and I was inclined to nod agreement.

But with this question much to the forefront today, we can preceive how incongruous it is that Washington, center of the democratic world, is itself without a vote.

It is an axiom, borne out by all human experience, and upon which all democratic government is based, that where government is not directly responsible to the governed, the latter suffer. Thus we have seen how much Congress has the interests of Washington at heart. It is not stretching things one bit, I think, to say that any Congressman, without exception, has more real consideration for the least hamlet he represents than for the voteless Capital.

To deny Washington the vote on the theory that it could thus be made a model city is to deny the principle of all representative government, and to call all politics a vice.

And so I believe it is incumbent upon the residents of Washington, and indeed upon all Americans, to protest with all their might, and if need be to raise hell, to get their simple and fundamental right, representation and the vote.

Encouraging Repetition

On the wires to Europe right now should be a photograph of eight German spies swinging side by side from an American gallows. The essence of time is important in such matters because it gives immediate warning to other plotters what they may expect in America. It is exactly what would have happened to Americans landing from submarines in German territory. If our practice runs true to precedent the argument already starting regarding whether military or civil courts have jurisdiction marks the beginning of the usual bunkum and procrastination ever present in our judicial system. This gives encouragement to repetition of such treachery.

People Like Henderson

The Congressional debates on Henderson's budget make a lamentable impression. At first Congress approves the Price Control Bill, then it refuses to grant the money which is necessary to administer the bill.

The critics of Henderson should go out and ask any painter, any carpenter, any school teacher or housewife, any working man or woman—as I did—and they will find that Henderson today is the most admired person in the Government. If he would run in a free and unbiased election against his critics, he would win every single race.

Political Appointees

The American people are very forbearing. It is almost instinctive with us to trust implicitly those whom we have put in authority. They lose this trust when they fail to perform their duties intelligently. When this occurs they should be replaced by more competent men. We are now at war and there is no place for an incompetent in a position of importance, where his incompetence makes it harder for our young men at the front to win the war. Our men at the front should not be made political pawns. Their lives are as precious to them and to their loved ones as are the lives of those for whom the men at the front are fighting and dying. The life of a soldier, a sailor, or a marine, at the front is more valuable to the country than the life of any politician or time server in Washington. The country's welfare is paramount.

The people clamored for a bombing of Japan so loudly that it was finally bombed once, apparently to satisfy the clamor as there has been no repetition. China needs planes urgently. Why not send them on carriers to a suitable distance east from Japan and then fly them over Japan bombing as they go and land in China for the use of the Chinese; the carriers returning to base as soon as relieved of their loads. Do this not once but regularly. It should not interfere with any other program. Put men in charge who can and will do this thing. Don't put the Nation in any greater peril by continuing inefficiency in high places for political or for other reasons. Stop guessing where Japan is going to strike us next and hit her so hard and so often where it hurts most that she won't have time to think when and where to strike us. Is that understandable to a politician? Try a few of Joe Louis' tactics. He never won a fight by just meeting the other man's offensive. I'll bet on the American soldier, sailor and marine against all the powers of hell, but the machine of which our men are a part must be intelligently administered.

The President is the elected head of the Nation. He is the Chief of all of our armed forces. Let him assume that authority. Let him forget that he is a Democrat. Let him think that it is better as an American to win the war than by sticking to politics and incompetent administrative political friends and thereby needlessly sacrifice the lives of our boys at the front and endanger our civilization. There is no temporary political recompense comparable to the enduring plaudits of a people grateful for the salvaging of civilization.

Home Defense

Now that boys 18 and 19 are being called to register why not consider them our reserve Army to be left here in America to protect American soil until they have reached the age of 21. They could be getting their military training while going to school and in that way they would have their education too. They would then be able to earn a decent living later on and while getting their military training and education they could be called on to protect America in case such protection is needed here. American people are becoming more and more dissatisfied that all our man power is being sent out of the country.

Everyone feels we should have an adequate Army left here.

The Post Impressionist

Feast Or Famine

An AWVS lieutenant warned the girls at the club the other afternoon of the food shortage to come. She pointed her finger straight at the girls and told them to urge their children and their neighbors' children to join the Land Army.

Now, the Land Army, as my wife, who had been at the meeting, explained at dinner that night, is a corps of bridled youngsters who hoe and harvest and heave hay—sort of a wartime 4-H. They will march soon into all the fields that have been drained of man power by the Army and industry.

It is, I judge from the explanation, upon the shoulders of these minors in the Land Army that our bountiful harvests rest. And, to add significance, this lieutenant AWVS emphasized that the United States must feed the world, except those territories under the foe's dastardly thumb, and we might even slip a crumb or two into the conquered lands if we get a chance.

Now, I like children. I'm crazy about children. No doubt they will weed and sow quite ardently. But kids are still kids, even in overalls, and they can't learn overnight to coax seeds to grow.

Therefore it seems advisable to reckon on some stiff rationing in the future if this war thing keeps up.

And we might take a few tips from the English on this belt-tightening, on how to do it in the fewest notches. The English have been in food lines for so long now that an English housewife can churn water with some success.

The English housewife is blessed, or damned, with Brussels sprouts. She serves them all winter long, practically daily. When spring comes she can let up a little and serve "greens" all summer. Greens are two-tone cabbages, boiled, of course. She is not, by the way, an ingenious person. Nor does she have things to do with, like a refrigerator or electric oven.

One English woman told me that she envied more than anything else in America, the American housewife with her battery of culinary gadgets.

Over there rationing dealt its cruelest blow on the working classes. They had just about lived on three things—cheese, bacon and jam. The Huns stopped the cheese when they moved into Scandinavia and Holland. U-boats cut the bacon supply, and the utter lack of sugar and fruit jammed the jelly supply.

The first American lend-lease cheese to pull into a Thames port was a subject of ceremony, calling for the Minister of Foods to exclaim, after nibbling: "And good cheese, too."

Bacon—which is really our sowbelly pawned off as bacon—from the United States created an English modicum of excitement, too. Cooked meats such as Spam and Prem were the occasion for newspaper comment, with recipes broadcast throughout the isles.

The cockneys took a stiff solar-plexus blow when rationing went in. They'd lived on fish and chips (fish fried in deep fat with French fried potatoes of a sort). Those evacuated to rural areas when the bombings started were stunned because no fish and chips were set on the rural tables. In fact, a number of cases are on record of cockneys returning to London to face the bombs rather than life on a country fare. They were more shocked to get home again and find the fish-and-chip shops closed . . . lack of cooking oil prevented the serving of the delicacy.

Visitors eating in unrationed restaurants and hotels had an unfair advantage. If they had money they ate better than the country. Recently, however, restaurant meals have been shortened to three courses—a sacrifice, indeed. Even then, the meals were mostly chicken and sprouts, a shaving of butter, no sugar, no cream, etc. One egg a week, with sometimes dried eggs scrambled, if you could stand it. Sometimes, too, there was a synthetic cream, of chalk or something.

If you think that's bad, just remember that while London expectant mothers were rationed on two-thirds of a pint of milk a day, Paris mothers-to-be were getting a pint a week.

Black-market cafes did provide a little relief from the monotony of chicken and sprouts, if you could afford it. Occasionally a wee bit of steak with potatoes and peas and a sugarless sweet for from 15 shillings to £1 ($3 to $4). Usually it cost you a petrol coupon, too.

Famed eating houses in London got down to chicken along with all the others. Roast beef was scant at Simpson's. (Lack of thick cream and sugar ruined their apple pies, too.) Rule's, in Maiden Lane, came down to featuring Mulligatawny, hot as Hades.

Oranges and lemons are nonexistent. The children got the few received. Once in a while a lone orange or two would seep out into the open market. I saw a man pay a shilling (about 20 cents) for one orange.

Attempts have been made to inspire Englishwomen to can vegetables. It has never been a custom there. Nor are supplies of canned goods available. So mobile canning kitchens would go from town to town, providing facilities for the housewives to put up the harvest of their "allotment" gardens.

(Allotment gardening was the vogue in cities, plots in city parks and parkways being made available to householders.)

Net result of rationing, if England may be an example, is that you won't starve. They aren't starving over there. You may feel hungry after a full meal. Your gums and teeth may suffer from lack of vitamins or calories. Over there the best eating is in restaurants. Single persons have a hard job scraping out a meal at home on a single ration card but two persons can pool their cards and it comes out fairly well . . . which might be interpreted in favor of marriage.

London seemed to eat better, generally speaking, than provincial England, with the exception of late spring, when vegetables were in bloom.

All in all, the English have managed pretty well on scanty rations. Why wouldn't it be a good idea to import a few English housewives to bring us helpful hints? They might bring along a few soldiers of their Land Army, too, because their Land Army is misses, and raw-ther nice, too. Raw-ther!

ARTHUR H. HUDSON.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Rendezvous

THE QUESTION is how Mr. R, professor of geography in an American university, could advise his countrymen that they ought to destroy several nations, among them the Swiss, in order to make a peace "to meet democratic specifications." How could a professor reach the conclusion that to promote democracy we should destroy a democracy, that to defend liberty we should dismember a free nation and place the separate parts of it under foreign domination? Surely we are bound to ask ourselves how in an institution which trains teachers, a man who reasons in this fashion can become a professor.

LIPPMANN

WE HAVE already noted that Professor R was quite unconscious of the fact that he was asking America to dishonor itself by committing an irreparable crime against an innocent, friendly, and highly civilized people. We argued that Professor R had become so immersed in the abstractions of the science that he had lost all sense of the realities of the world: that Switzerland for him was not actually Switzerland but a patch of color on a map and some statistics about the languages of the Swiss nation. Thus he was proposing to dismember a paper map and not the living body of an ancient community.

But we must dig deeper, I submit, and ask ourselves then why a man could emerge from the academic study of bloodless and soulless abstractions, come out into the real world, and not know that men cannot be dealt with as if they were paper dolls and inanimate objects. How did Professor R happen not to know that other men, Swiss men, Belgian men, Portuguese and many other men, have bodies and minds, memories and wills, reason and inviolable souls which a civilized man must respect, and that he dare not deal with them as if they were manikins and robots? Professor R would not think of wishing to have done to himself what in his cool and supposedly scientific way he wishes to do unto others. How then can he be a professor of science, and a teacher of teachers, and an expert on human society, and yet lack the elementary wisdom of the human race, yet be ungoverned by the basic rule of human behavior?

THE ALMOST certain answer is that he is the product of an academic system in which the study of moral wisdom has been abandoned. In this system men learn to reach conclusions on practical issues without being subject to the discipline of a moral education. Thus they do not know why they have reached the conclusions they reached. Professor R, for example, hands over the German-speaking Swiss to a greater German state because he thinks that all who speak German should be under one government. But why must all who speak the German language live under one government: all those who speak Spanish, all those who speak English, do not live under one government?

Professor R picks up the language principle because that seems to him convenient when he is thinking of Germany. Yet the fact is that during all the centuries in which men have spoken German there has never been a Germany which included them all. This testimony from human experience ought to indicate something which a wise man would feel bound to take into account before he allowed himself to think it self-evident that all German-speaking peoples must be united in one political state.

THIS IS what happens when specialized sciences which are concerned with human affairs are studied without knowledge of the tradition of wisdom and without the discipline of a moral education. All the great educators, beginning with Plato and Aristotle, have insisted that training in the art of distinguishing good and evil must precede the making of practical judgments in human affairs. Milton, himself a sharp critic of the scholastic education of his day, designed a plan of education in which he took special care to postpone the study of politics until the pupil had learned "with some judgment" to "contemplate upon moral good and evil."

The pupils, said Milton, will require "a special reinforcement of constant and sound indoctrinating to set them right and firm, instructing them amply in the knowledge of virtue and the hatred of vice . . . being perfect in the knowledge of personal duty, they may then begin the study of economics." By economics Milton meant the management of household and private expenses. "The next remove," he then says, "must be to the study of politics." In Milton's plan, which is in principle that of a liberal education throughout the ages, a moral education must precede the study of politics. We might add that the study of language as a means of learning how to think precedes the study of morals.

IN THE AMERICAN schools and colleges we have gone very far towards abandoning the idea that an education should be grounded upon the deliberate training of the mind and upon a discipline in the making of moral choices. We have been told to jump over these ancient preliminaries and induct the pupil directly into the study of the burning issues of contemporary life.

That produces a little learning with no wisdom, some acquaintance with a few books and no knowledge of human experience, a thin intellectualism which is not reason. It turns out reformers without moral restraint, humanitarians without human respect, philanthropists without philosophy, and enthusiasts without religion.

This century, we have been told, will belong to the common man. We may be certain, I believe, that it will belong to tyrants, demagogues, and mediocrities if the schools do not restore to the common man the heritage of his culture. For men cannot remain free if they are not educated in the things which have caused men to conceive freedom and to cherish it and to enhance it.

If Western civilization is to survive and renew its vitality, we shall have, therefore, to revive and renew our schools.

SO WHEN the war is over, we have a rendezvous with ourselves to consider as a matter of high priority, the restoration and the reconstruction of American education.

Headlines And War

Overoptimism Prevails

THERE WAS once an American general named U. S. Grant, who wrote to a fellow general saying, "I propose to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

The battle Grant was talking about was a big one for the war he was fighting. But in this war, now, it would seem like a scrap between a couple of squads. The forces that fought in Virginia in 1864 were not one-fiftieth the size of the armies now in the field. And they were fighting in their own back yards, however gallant and able as soldiers and leaders the men of those armies were. Whereas the war for the world of today—and tomorrow—covers all the seas of the world and most of its lands.

There are a lot of Americans today who want to apply Grant's words to a war that is 50 times bigger. They have gathered the idea somehow that a summer of short gasoline and sugar—and of heavy production and a bit of hard fighting—is going to be enough to win against the strongest armies and most vicious enemies in the whole history of the world. And, according to Cecil Brown of C. B. S., there are already some in the country who think it will all be over so soon that saving the rubber of tires is already nonsense.

In Editor and Publisher for May 23 (Editor and Publisher is an Army and Navy register for newspapermen), Nat Floyd, a Manila newspaperman who was with our troops on Bataan, took a full-page ad of his own to protest against the treatment of war news in American papers. And The Infantry Journal thinks he's right when he lays the trouble mainly on the desk of the headline writer.

". . . If 3000 Chinese," he says, "catch 300 Japs in a canefield and slaughter them, we leave out the numbers and hail victory. I've seen more dead Japs than that on Bataan, in one bunch, and it didn't change anything."

"THERE MUST be some slanting of the news and headlines in our favor," he continues. "But we're overdoing it. I complain because this fantastic practice is helping keep our people complacent . . . How would it be to start playing war stories on their merit?"

"With all my heart," he goes on, "I urge you to stop and ask yourself how in hell we can win without killing Japs and Germans?

"Are our people so dainty you can't mention such a thing? Even when their own lives and freedom are at stake?"

And in his appeal at the end he asks every man on a newspaper or a magazine to "let the people be afraid, as they damn sure have a right to be now; . . . they'll quit walking around with fatuous grins on their faces and get to work . . ."

"In the name of their lives and freedom," he begs in conclusion, "don't keep telling our people how good we are with unjustified emphasis in news stories and misleading headlines. It has put us on the spot. Hollywood isn't writing the script for this show. Let's face reality. Quick."

Mr. Floyd has seen battle. He has seen it in this war. He has seen us lose the first of our fights. He has seen the strength and guts of our foes overcome—by the hardest of fighting as well as by numbers—the strength and guts of our own fighting men. He says, as The Infantry Journal itself has been saying, that the job before us is the most desperate fight that mankind ever proposed to carry through.

HOW LONG will it take? Will it take just a summer? Or two, or three, or five?. No man short of the highest command can answer that question. And nobody can with accuracy. And certainly no soldier or citizen of any rank, who doesn't have access to the immense details of war, the secret reports, the confidential summaries and estimates, can possibly be justified in thinking that a single summer can bring the close, put cars again on the roads and sugar in plenty back in the bin.

Without any more dope than the average newspaper or magazine editor—and nowhere near as much as some of the big ones—but with something of a practical background in matters of war, it has seemed to The Infantry Journal from the beginning that this would probably be a war of years. We hope with the world that it can be over sooner. But we look at the forces that seek the world, and at what they have won and where they have reached to, and think of the tremendous national and international might of arms it is yet most likely to take to win. And we see no troops or fleets sailing homeward, no squadrons flying back, through the autumn skies with final victory in the war for the world behind them.

Victory by then there well may be. Victories in battles of sea, air and ground. Victories that will bring lost areas back to our allies and ourselves. Victories that will show our allies and our enemies the will and the power of American arms—that will point with steel fingers in the new, the reversed, the ultimate direction of the war. But not the final victory.

If U. S. Grant had happened to high command in this later and greater war he might have written to a fellow general the same stout proposal to "fight it out." But he would never have limited himself to a single season. He knew too much about war for that. He would have probably said, "I propose to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer and winter, and the whole of the next four or five as well."

Grant's thought was a thought of keeping at it. Of keeping on hammering and attacking a stubborn foe no matter how long it took to win.

That's the thought we must keep in our heads. Our plans must be for a war of any duration. Our commanders and those of our allies, plus possible internal assistance in the hostile and conquered nations, might conceivably end the war in a period of months. But the chances of war seem to be that we'd better figure on a period counted in years, and say to ourselves, every man and woman of America, "Five months or five years—this war is mine to fight for my life. I shall help and fight with my heart and strength as long as it takes. And if I have not begun to fight, I swear to do so now."

The Gallup Poll

Plans for Second Front Find Strong Backing In Canada; Even Quebec Favors Move

By George Gallup

By Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

Toronto, July 3.—Popular demand for a second front against the Germans, which has dominated British thinking for some months, finds a loud echo in Canada.

Throughout the Dominion nearly half of voters polled by the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion believe a second front should be opened in Europe without delay. This closely parallels the attitude in Britain, where those with opinions believe that the opening of a second front, while it may be costly this year, will bring worthwhile results.

In Canada the issue was put to the public in the form of an open question as follows:

"One hears and reads a lot of arguments for and against opening a second front against the Germans. What is your opinion of this?"

The opinions of Canadians fall into the following general categories:

Should open second front now	46%
When ready but not before	18
Should leave to authorities, or No Opinion	29
Against second front	6
It has already been opened	1

Most of the six per cent against a second front believe that a land attack in Europe will be unnecessary—that Germany can be defeated without such an operation, through intensified air attacks and increasing Allied aid to Russia.

The poll reveals an interesting sidelight on public thinking in Quebec. In Canada's recent plebiscite Quebec voted against freeing the government's hand to conscript men for overseas service. Yet in today's survey the people of Quebec are more in favor of opening a second front than the average for Canada as a whole, the Quebec vote being 53 per cent in favor of such a move.

Polls conducted in England by the British Institute of Public Opinion have repeatedly shown in recent months a rising tide of sentiment in favor of opening a second front this year.

Last month the British Institute put it up to the people of Britain in this way:

"Some people say that even if invading the continent this summer might cost more than invading next summer, the results would make the cost worthwhile. Do you agree or disagree that the cost would be worthwhile?"

The results were:

Agree	49%
Disagree	17
Don't know	34

7 Enemy Planes Downed at Malta

Valletta, Malta, July 3 (AP).—Seven enemy planes—four fighters and three bombers—were shot down over Malta in the last 24 hours, British headquarters announced today.

For 'Last Battle'

'Prepare,' De Gaulle Tells French

By the Associated Press

Unessy and hungry Europe was was told by the Free French leader Gen. Charles de Gaulle last night that the decisive battle of the war would be fought in France, and as he spoke the German masters of the continent were hastily reinforcing their coasts against invasion.

The French general declared the Axis, despite its initial successes, was farther from victory than ever and that the Allied forces facing Hitler were five times greater than they were a year ago.

"It is a great thing in war to have won the first battle," he said, "but it is the last one which will decide everything. It will take place in France. . . . Let every Frenchman prepare."

Stockholm reports said the Germans had greatly reinforced their occupation garrisons in Norway and Denmark and were enforcing blackouts. Danes were barred from the beaches and new "invasion alarms" were being practiced in Belgium.

Dr. Robert Ley, head of the German labor front, reached Paris to recruit French workers for German factories after a tour of work on invasion defenses along the Britanny and Norman coasts of occupied France. There he told laborers:

"Across the water is the enemy, English mercenaries of the United States. You stand facing the enemy eye to eye. You know him. We have every chance of winning this struggle if you want to."

Russians Confident

As the Russians engaged the mass of the German army, the Volga commune added its voice to the second front threat with this resolution:

"Becoming more and more the arsenal of the democratic countries, the United States is actively preparing to participate with the Soviet Union and Great Britain in immediate fights against Hitler's armies. The ever-increasing R. A. F. raids against German industrial centers in which the Americans shall soon participate are necessary for successful actions of land troops and the navies which undoubtedly will follow."

The severe food pinch in Hitler's "new Europe"—aggravated by the Anglo-American blockade—brought new rationing or orders to produce more foods in Germany, Italy, Hungary and Switzerland.

The German Food Minister announced that 6,177,000 acres sown last autumn would have to be worked again this summer because of winter damages. German reports said it still was hoped that the smaller yield of grains and oil seed could be compensated by increased productions and better distribution.

Italy Cuts Rations

Italy again cut its meat ration. In its efforts to produce more food, a threshing machine was installed in the Milan Square to thresh wheat from the public parks.

The Swiss also are using parks for garden plots. They announced two meatless weeks effective July 8 to permit winter storage. The ration for the rest of the month was set at 1½ pounds. The Swiss normally have two meatless days a week.

Hungary also started meat rationing and ordered park lawns placed in cultivation.

Bucharest reports said Rumania would be unable to export wheat and other grains this year because of the acute home requirements.

Reports from Rumania said that as a result of recent staggering losses in Russia, Rumanian troops were being mixed with Germans under German command. Separate Rumanian communiques and the Rumanian high command were reported discontinued.

The Bucharest press published long lists of dead and declared Russian tenacity was as strong as ever.

Fair Enough

Pegler Writes A Letter

MRS. ELEANOR ROOSEVELT,
United Features Syndicate, New York.

Dear Mrs. Roosevelt:

You remarked in your piece the other night that you had seen a film called "Native Land" and said it presented the worst side of the picture of our country and that I depict the worst side of the reverse. I will not dwell on the fact that this film is Communist propaganda against our form of Government and thus against the freedom and the lives of all of us and might better have been called "Down Republic — Up Soviet," but I think it deserves mention inasmuch as you have given the show a nice plug as "a beautiful piece of photography and most artistically produced." The Germans and Italians have very good photographers and producers, too, and we may be sure that if they undertook to portray the failure of free government in the sisterhood of republic known as the United States of America, they, too, would turn out some beautiful photography and an artistic effort. They would go to town to show as convincingly as they could that our form of Government just can't work.

I wonder if you would care to express your position on the facts presented in my "worst side of the reverse," as you call it, because it has always seemed to me that you were certainly tolerant of this side and might actually approve it. However, I have never known you to express yourself definitely on the subject, and I am sure I am not the only person who wishes you would. I might have a strong impression.

By "the worst side of the reverse" I suppose you refer to my writing on the subject of racketeering and graft and the violation of some of the most important principles of our kind of government by the private subgovernments known as unions.

Mrs. Roosevelt, do you ever meet any real union members? I don't mean those horn-rimmed ideologists who are to be found around the so-called labor schools and social and political study centers. I mean common, ordinary, walk-around American working men and women. I meet a lot of them, Mrs. Roosevelt, and get letters from many more and I tell you they are not happy in their unionism. That "not happy" is a deliberate understatement. For example, and just an ordinary example, how would you like to talk with an honest unioneer who was lured into a hotel room in Albany a few years ago and slugged horribly with bottles and fists by that filthy racketeer and thug, Joe Fay, of the so-called Operating Engineers' Union—which is a sweet-scented racket—and several other low-lived goons of that which I believe you sometimes called "the labor movement?" I think I know a man who could fix up an interview for you and from this start I might be able to lead you along to other interviews with other workers and union officials all over the country who have been ruled by terror and robbed of their earnings in the most brutal defiance of my concept of American freedom which, of course, may not be yours. I could present many honest unioneers who have been powerless under the rule of vicious upper bosses of the unions.

Mrs. Roosevelt, the racket publications of the A. F. of L. have said over and over that Browne, Bioff and Scalise were only three criminals turned up in the leadership or command of their unions. They are terrible liars, Mrs. Roosevelt, and they lie to cover up the betrayal of the workers and the American people as a whole by the so-called leaders of the A. F. of L. Hundreds of criminals have been turned up and convicted, Mrs. Roosevelt, and hundreds of other racketeers, such as this drunken underworld thug Joe Fay, are still in full operation, dragging down more of the workers' money than ever before by taking a top cut off the wages of the people in the war tasks. They get first chop of the people's wages. They get there even before the United States Treasury with its income tax and other tax collections. Then they stand ready to spend as much of this money as need be to continue in power the party of which you are a very active political agent because you, for example, have indicated what I take to be tolerance of their wicked abuses by your personal failure ever to say or do anything against them and because in Washington, "The White House" has said nothing against them but has prevented the passage of corrective laws by our National Legislature.

Really, Mrs. Roosevelt, the "worst side of the reverse" is much worse than I have depicted it. I am only a single-handed loner in this, and I have a hundred leads for every one that I have the time, personally, to investigate, verify and report in print. I am willing to believe that you don't really know how bad it is, but would you be willing to listen to proof, or is that asking too much of your time?

Yours very truly,

WESTBROOK PEGLER.

British to Run Tea Buying for All United Nations

The British, who drink more tea than any other people, have been given charge of buying it for all the United Nations, the War Production Board announced yesterday.

The purchasing agent will be the United Kingdom Food Ministry under agreement reached among representatives of the British, the WPB, the Board of Economic Warfare, the State Department and the Department of Agriculture.

The purpose of the agreement is to obtain equitable distribution, at fair prices, of world tea supplies which have been reduced about one-fifth by Japanese conquests in the Pacific.

Guerilla Warriors

By Isaac Stone

Part Of The Regular Soviet Army

UNTIL the dissolution of the regular Serbian Army in the spring of last year and the Nazi-Soviet clash at the end of June, the term "guerilla warfare" enjoyed limited currency. Guerilla groups were known to operate in Norway and in certain parts of Poland, but it was generally understood that these consisted of ill-equipped peasant bands, who made occasional sorties on isolated outposts of the invaders, inflicting some casualties and causing some damage to transports. Many even doubted the wisdom and practicability of these attacks since the retaliatory measures imposed by the invaders on the neighboring populations were out of proportion to the damage inflicted on the enemy. As a factor in the general war picture these guerilla units were certainly negligible.

Serbia's guerillas, known as Chetniks ("Cheta" signifying company or band), were the first to attract world-wide attention. In view of their achievements, guerillas could no longer be dismissed as an element of small consequence. Anticipating a clash with Germany and possible defeat, the Serbian High Command established Chetnik units, consisting exclusively of volunteers, which were to begin their special operations at the first call to arms. Physical toughness, agility, and knowledge of mountainous areas were the primary qualifications of a Chetnik. As the regular Serbian Army broke up, the Chetnik groups were augmented by the patriotic soldiers who would not yield to enslavement.

Led by the doughty, elusive, almost legendary 45-year old Drazha Mihailo Mihailovic, the Chetnik bands have harried the invaders from all sides, annihilating entire garrisons, damaging stores and transports, with the result that they now control almost two-thirds of their country. Airplanes and tanks cannot halt their progress. Punitive expeditions sent against them, consisting of troops wholly unfit for this mode of warfare, rarely accomplish their purpose; their remnants usually vent their vengeance on the village populations, who, they know, provide the Chetniks with information and foodstuffs. Drazha Mihailovic is ably aided by the old Komitazhi leader, Kosta Pechanats, whose guerilla days date back to the sultans.

THUS the Chetniks of Serbia, Montenegro, Bosnia, and Herzegovina are to Hitler what Napoleon said about the Spanish guerillas in 1812: "a running sore." President Roosevelt has taken note of the great part now played by guerillas in declaring, "Let us not forget that the guerillas in, say, Norway and Serbia are helping us."

Significant as unquestionably are the accomplishments of the Norwegian, Polish, and Serbian guerillas, they pale in comparison with the organization, scope of activities, and achievements of the Russian guerilla units. Guerilla war in Russia has a long and honorable history. During the Patriotic War of 1812 Napoleon's "grande armee" was relentlessly pursued and decimated over a 500-mile route by bands of peasants armed with knives, axes, spears. Tolstoi celebrated their heroism and brave leaders in his immortal "War and Peace," which is now enjoying a wide reading public.

Bolshviek leadership has from the beginning of the establishment of Soviet rule realized the importance of guerilla warfare. During the turbulent years of the Civil War, while the regular Soviet armies were engaged on numerous fronts, in vast stretches of territory that were bitterly contested by marauding gangs led by adventurous chieftains the only Soviet outposts consisted of guerilla units, known as "Partizantsy" or Partisans. These units constituted the nuclei from which developed regular army formations. The lore of the Civil War abounds in epic tales of the heroic exploits of the guerilla warriors. Former Defense Commissar Voroshilov, the repowned cavalry commander, Budenny, and the present Defense Commissar Marshal Semyon K. Timoshenko are distinguished alumni of the school of guerilla warfare.

The lessons of the Civil War were not lost upon Stalin, and upon achieving supreme power he sought, so to speak, to modernize guerilla or "partisan" warfare. To the Soviets indeed belongs the credit of being the first nation to make the guerilla units an integral part of the army apparatus, with special training and functions. Many years of meticulous preparation have preceded the present operations of the Russian guerillas, whose renown now resounds throughout the world. Slightly over a week after the treacherous Nazi assault on the Soviets Stalin addressed the following words to the "partisan" detachments: "In territories occupied by the enemy, guerilla units, on horseback and on foot, should be formed, diversionist formations should be organized to fight enemy troops, to stir up guerilla warfare everywhere, to blow up bridges and roads, disrupt telephone and telegraph lines, and burn forests, stores, transports."

In his speech before the Moscow Soviet, on November 6, on the occasion of the 24th anniversary of the Revolution, Stalin again alluded to the guerilla units. "The German army," he said, "has been forced to create a new, rear front in foreign lands, one that is being destroyed by our partisans, who are extirpating by the roots the provisioning facilities of the German army, compelling it to fear for the security of its rear, and shaking its faith in its situation."

The Soviet guerillas had indeed gone into action and had harried the enemy at every turn at points where he had least expected it. Members of regularly trained guerilla units are all volunteers and are carefully selected. The chief qualifications are physical hardihood, resourcefulness, quick intelligence, alertness, initiative, self-reliance, courage, and, above all, adeptness in the use and manipulation of every type of arms, of Russian as well as German make. Clearly the Russian guerillas are not irregular bands, consisting of adventurous, romantic, devil-may-care, foreign-legion characters, but strictly disciplined units, each member being subject to a definite set of military regulations, accountable at all times to his superiors. Every "partisan" is required to take the following oath: "I, a Red guerilla, swear before my comrades-in-combat that I shall be brave, disciplined, and pitiless toward the enemy. I shall remain faithful to the end of my days to my country, my party, and my leader Stalin. If I violate this sacred oath may severe punishment be inflicted on me at the hands of the guerillas."

The character of the guerillas' equipment is determined by the nature of the tasks which it is their duty to execute. These tasks are: to destroy the enemy's means of communication, such as bridges and roads; set fire to transports and stores; organize constant, yet carefully planned, night raids on the foe's rear positions and wreak havoc and confusion by throwing explosives into tents and depots.

CONSEQUENTLY the guerillas must be especially skillful in the manipulation of explosives of all sorts and in the handling of automatic guns and small cannon, and must know the enemy's modes and habits of warfare. While horses are naturally much in use, most of the guerilla detachments are motorized, some possessing antitank guns and small tanks capable of being maneuvered in thickly wooded areas.

Of supreme significance are a knowledge of the terrain and careful reconnaissance work. The scouts are the eyes and ears of the guerillas. Much depends on their ingenuity, courage, alertness. They, in turn, are dependent on the cooperation of the peasant populations in the occupied areas, who are in a position to report the enemy's movements. Such wholehearted sympathy and cooperation are ever assured them, for the peasant groups, be they Poles, White Russians, Ukrainians, Latvians, Lithuanians, are united in their hatred for the invaders, who had robbed them of all their possessions, and in many places tortured and slaughtered and burned their kin alive. After the reports of the different scouts come in, a plan of action is determined upon, the proper individuals are chosen and the signals rehearsed.

Mass guerilla action must of necessity take place in the thick of night. The endless, impenetrable, terrifying pine forests of Eastern Europe are the guerillas' favorite hideouts, providing nature's most perfect shelter against detection. One yard within the forest and one is wholly out of sight.

This type of warfare was something entirely unexpected by the Nazi hordes. In all their conquests in Western Europe the rear was safe from enemy depredations, while in the East, no sooner had they overrun new territory than they were harassed, pursued, harried, and attacked by regular army formations operating in their rear and equipped with the most destructive tools.

In all lands and climes the universal prayer of every soldier is night, which brings respite from toil and combat. But due to the guerillas, night holds only terror and sudden death for the Nazi warrior. Main highways being scarce in all of Eastern Europe, large masses of German troops and especially transports must move along the primitive, narrow lanes criss-crossing the tangled, trackless woods. They then become the ready prey of the guerillas. So much destruction of life and material had the guerillas wrought among the Nazi battalions that one month after the commencement of the war their troops shunned all forest roads, considering them death-traps. Nor is rest permitted them in village encampments, for the scouts, soon aware of their numbers and dispositions through the aid of the villagers, quickly summon the detachments for the night assaults.

QUICKLY the guerillas sensed that the Nazi troops are completely helpless against night attacks. They simply lose their heads and bearings, shoot at random, or run for their lives. Except on rare unavoidable occasions, the guerillas will not take prisoners, who would merely be a liability in view of their limited supplies and small personnel.

The Soviets estimate that during the first five months of the war the guerillas killed over 100,000 soldiers and officers, and caused untold destruction of war material.

Every killed guerilla warrior is an irreplaceable loss; removed from the main army, they cannot replenish their ranks, save for peasant-volunteers, whose skill nowhere equals their devotion. If a guerilla sustains a wound and cannot be rescued by his comrades, it is best that he take his own life, for the Nazi monsters entertain an inexpressible hatred for these invisible warriors.

So far the Nazis have not devised any means of counteracting the guerilla menace, nor will they for a long time to come. The forests of Eastern Europe invariably become the graves of their searching and punitive expeditions.

Such was the scope of the damage which the guerillas inflicted during the past summer on the enemy that Hitler was finally compelled to take cognizance of them by referring to the Soviets' unfairness in conducting warfare not according to the rules of the game. The Nazi leaders can be unconsciously humorous.

Spring and summer are for obvious reason the ideal seasons for guerilla activity. Consequently, at this moment over stretches of thousands of miles in the rear of Hitler's regions guerilla bands, imbued with high idealism, contemptuous of death, skilled in warfare, harry the enemy at every vital point.

It cannot be denied that the life of the guerilla is difficult and precarious. Existence is in constant danger, of rest there is little, hospital facilities are meager, and food supplies are scant. He may not even indulge in the heavenly delight of a Russian soldier, namely, lighting a cigarette at night, for which the penalty is death. Moreover, if existence is hard for the men, it is infinitely more so for the women, of whom there are many attached to guerilla units, primarily in the capacity of nurses. Only supreme devotion to ideal and fatherland can sustain these patriots and give them strength. Imbued with high courage and sustained by exalted hope, the guerillas carry on. Their contribution in the present war is a glowing chapter in the tortuous yet luminous story of human liberation.

Cabinet Roundup Reveals No Gala Plans for Today

Quiet Fourth of July Scheduled for Most Of President's Official Family

By Carolyn Bell

With very few exceptions, the President's official family is spending a quiet Fourth of July. "Oh, he will be busy at his desk," was the almost-general reply in answer to the well-known question. However, a few Cabinet members are managing to slip away for at least two days of much-needed relaxation. And strangely, nary a speech will be heard from the Cabinet, on this patriotic occasion, for as one Secretary put it "We are too busy these days to make speeches."

Both the Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace will remain quietly at home this weekend. Although Mrs. Wallace usually manages to get off to Iowa about this time every year, she has "no plans" thus far. With them is their daughter, Jean, home from Connecticut College. More than likely the Fourth will be just like any other day to hard-working Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, who drew up to the State Department in his limousine at the usual time this morning.

It's not often that the Secretary of the Treasury, Henry A. Morgenthau, has time to relax and enjoy his Duchess County farm, but this weekend he and Mrs. Morgenthau are at Fishkill for several days.

Mrs. Morgenthau Helps Bond Drive

Since resigning her job at O. C. D., Mrs. Morgenthau has more or less dropped out of the limelight, publicity being something she has always tried her hardest to avoid. Headlines or no, however, the Treasury Secretary's wife is just as busy as ever, with a desk and full time working hours. She is assisting Miss Harriet Elliot, whose official title is Associate Field Director of the Women's Section of the War Saving Staff of the Treasury. They have offices in the Sloane Building, plan campaigns for stamp and bond drives etc, and Mrs. Morgenthau is considered a regular member of the staff.

Although they should like to get up to their place Highold in Huntington, Long Island, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson will probably remain right here in the Capital with only the pleasant surroundings of Woodley to take their minds off the war news.

Spies and saboteurs would seem to claim the time and attention of the Attorney General, Francis Biddle, these war days. However, Mrs. Biddle left early in the week for New Jersey where she is visiting her sister, Miss Cornelia Chapin at Rumson. Mrs. Biddle plans to be away a week or 10 days.

The Postmaser General, Frank Walker, will celebrate the Fourth of July by arriving at work just a bit earlier than usual this morning. Mrs. Walker is spending the weekend quietly in their apartment at Wardman Park Hotel. They have been recently joined by their daughter, Miss Laura Hallie Walker, who has been attending Merrymount School on the Hudson.

Secretary Knox In Manchester

Off for just a few days of rest is the Secretary of Navy, Frank Knox, who manages a routine that would put an average working man to shame. He left on Friday for Manchester, N. H., where he has joined Mrs. Knox at their summer home. The Secretary expects to be back tomorrow, but Mrs. Knox will remain in Manchester for a while.

It's to be a quiet weekend at the farm, for the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold Ickes. Out Olney, Md., way Mrs. Ickes is well known for her expert handling of their farm and it is not often that the youthful wife of the Secretary can be coaxed away from Headwaters.

"He will be at his desk, as usual" is the way Mrs. Jesse Jones describes the Fourth plans of the Secretary of Commerce. Although they too usually have at least a trip to Texas already chalked up by this time, so far the Commerce head and Mrs. Jones have made no definite summer plans.

Having left early last week, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard are in Mexico City for a week or 10 days. Upon their return Mrs. Wickard will probably go to their farm in Camden, Ind., before returning to the Capital. Meanwhile their daughter, Ann, who is at Purdue University taking summer courses, manages to put in an afternoon's work on the farm following her studies.

The Secretary of Labor, Frances Perkins, is remaining in town this weekend and so far has no summer plans.

Emma White Is Married

An out-of-town wedding of interest in Washington yesterday was that of Miss Emma Gray Ward White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry White, jr., of Flordon, University, Va., and formerly of Washington, to Charles C. Hillyer of Jacksonville, Fla.

The ceremony took place at the Westminster Presbyterian Church in University, near Charlottesville, Va.

Mrs. Winn To Be Guest Of Marshalls

Mrs. James J. Winn and her seven-month-old son will stop off in Washington as guests of the Chief of Staff of the Army, Gen. George C. Marshall, and Mrs. Marshall within the next week or two on their way to join Major Winn at his new station, Fort Bragg, N. C.

The Winns returned from Panama about the middle of last month and came directly to Washington where they were guests of General and Mrs. Marshall at their quarters in Fort Myer, Va.

After a few days' visit here the Winns went on to Fire Island, New York, where they have been at the summer home of General and Mrs. Marshall. Major Winn, who accompanied them to Fire Island went on within a few days to Fort Bragg, but Mrs. Winn and her son have remained at Fire Island and will be there a few days more. Mrs. Winn, the former Miss Molly Pender Brown, is the daughter of Mrs. Marshall.

Marcia Moldawer And H. S. Bizar Are Married

In a simple ceremony yesterday morning at the Mayflower, Miss Marcia Moldawer and Howard Stanley Bizar were united in marriage. She is the daughter of Mrs. Albert Moldawer and the late Mr. Moldawer and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bizar of Jersey City, N. J.

Dr. Hugo Schiff read the service at 10 o'clock in the presence of the immediate families, and a breakfast followed at the hotel. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Leonard Moldawer. She wore an afternoon frock of powder blue made with a draped skirt and short sleeves. A matching turban with a face veil and a corsage of white orchids completed the costume. Bernard Bizar served as best man for his brother.

Mrs. Bizar attended George Washington University and the bridegroom is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin. He received his M. A. degree from Columbia University and is now engaged in aeronautical engineering.

Following a two weeks' stay at Lake George, N. Y., the couple will make their home in Jersey City.

Navy Lieutenant To Wed Miss Harvey

Mr. and Mrs. Julian H. Harvey of New York announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jane Elizabeth Harvey, to Lieut. (j. g.) Lester Dow Burger, U. S. N. R. With their daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey arrived in town yesterday to see Lieutenant Burger, who is on duty here. They are at the Shoreham for the weekend.

Miss Harvey attended Garrison Forest School in Green Spring Valley, Md., and was graduated from National Cathedral School here. She was also graduated from Wheaton College at Norton, Mass.

Lieutenant Burger is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Dow Burger of Cobleskill, N. Y. He was graduated from Phillips Exeter Academy and Harvard University.

Mary Amelia Dutton Is Bride of Navy Lieutenant

The marriage of Miss Mary Amelia Dutton, daughter of Mrs. Benjamin Dutton of Annapolis and the late Captain Dutton, U. S. Navy, to Lieut. (j.g.) Pierre Charbonnet, U. S. Navy, son of Dr. and Mrs. P. N. Charbonnet of Tulsa, Okla., took place recently in St. Andrew's Chapel at the United States Naval Academy.

The Rev. Francis T. Newell of St. Mary's Catholic Church officiated at the 10 o'clock ceremony in the candle-lit chapel on June 30. Admiral John Beardall, Superintendent of the Naval Academy, gave the bride in marriage. Following the wedding a reception took place at the Officers Club. The bride's father had extended service here and served abroad as naval attache.

The wedding took place at 8 o'clock in the Grace Church in the presence of relatives and friends, several of whom traveled down from Washington for the event. The Rev. Joseph R. Alten read the service.

William C. Miller, jr., gave his sister in marriage. She was attired in white silk marquisette designed with lace insets and a torso bodice. The skirt flared into a long train and a pearl coronet held the full-length veil. She wore an heirloom heart-shaped diamond pin and carried a white prayerbook with a bouquet of orchids.

Mrs. Beers attended the National Cathedral School for Girls here and was graduated from the Master's School at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. The bridegroom attended the United States Military Academy. Among those from Washington who attended the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Allison N. Miller and Miss Bertha Murphy.

Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

Many Activities Still in Progress At Washington International Club

DESPITE the delicate, international problems brought on by World War II, friendships still blossom and remain stanch among members of the Washington International Club. And the club is carrying on with a full, live summer schedule.

War, however, has changed the complexion of the club. Heretofore, French was the predominant language on the study list and the majority of foreign members were Europeans. Now with the Latin American in the majority, Spanish has become the popular language.

When the various nationalities—Chinese, Filipinos, Latin Americans, European refugees and North Americans—gather for club functions they avoid war talk. Only the members who hail from neutral countries discuss war events. These, who are definitely pro-Ally, argue at length on their countries' position—always on the defensive side. This is the observation of Kathryn Bartimo, chairman of the club's summer program committee.

Kathryn Bartimo

Others on the committee are Kerstin Lindberg of Sweden, Frances Anderson and Sidney Ostrow.

In winter the club's activities are cultural, educational and intellectual. But, come summer, accent goes on the social side. Purpose of the club is to bring together those foreign and American students who are interested in promoting international and inter-racial good will and understanding.

Alert, scholarly Kenneth Sze, who hails from China—studied in Shanghai—is the club's energetic president. At present he is studying medicine at George Washington University.

On the list of summer activities is a ping pong tournament today and tomorrow. Finals in the ping pong contest July 10 will be followed by a party honoring the victor. July 17 will be British Commonwealth Night—uniformed women will be the guests of honor. Also of high interest is the amateur photography contest now a popular summer feature of the club.

Kenneth Sze

The Washington International Club is composed of both boy and girl students. Headquarters is the International Student House, 1708 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest. All club activities are closely linked with those of the International House. Last night Mrs. Alberta Morris of Philadelphia, who has just been appointed house director by the American Friends Service Committee, entertained a group of young women warworkers from the British Embassy. As a contribution to the war effort, Mrs. Morris expects to make the swing of the various embassies and legations with that type of informal entertaining at the club. However, she pointed out that she would remain in her present position only until the permanent director returns from occupied France to resume her duties.

Owned by Friends Service Committee

The International Student House is owned and operated by the American Friends Service Committee, a corporation of the State of Pennsylvania which represents all branches of the Religious Society of French Quakers.

Chinese, Filipinos and Latin Americans are in the majority at the house as well as in the club. A few Europeans still reside there—but none belonging to the Axis nations.

Like the club, the house has felt the impact of the war. Residents have become more transient because of the unsettled war conditions.

Women's Press Club to Honor Nurses

OYEZ, OYEZ, the Women's National Press Club is calling a special luncheon meeting Tuesday at 1 o'clock at the Willard Hotel. Purpose of the meeting is to hear the story of the six Army nurses who were decorated for service at Bataan and Corregidor.

Lieut. Col. Carlos Romulo, aide de camp to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, will talk briefly, as will Col. Julia Flikke, director of the Army Nurse Corps and one of the nurses. All will answer questions. Mary Beard, director of nursing services for the American Red Cross, is another who will be on hand to answer questions.

Colonel Romulo, the last man to leave Corregidor, is on a special mission in this country and soon will rejoin General MacArthur in Australia. The six nurses are resting briefly at Walter Reed Hospital before being assigned to recruiting duty for the Nurses Corps.

Usually the Women's National Press Club adjourns for the summer, but the new president, Christine Sadler, considers this meeting too important to miss. Also, she says that other meetings may be called from time to time during the summer.

Story Hour for Tots

THERE'S a bit of fantasy in store for the children. Instead of reading in a hot, summer house they can go the Children's Museum of Washington for the weekly story hour held each Thursday night at 8 o'clock in the walled-in-garden of the Villa Rosa, 4215 Massachusetts Avenue. Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell, president of the Story League, is in charge of the programs.

At the first story hour held this week, Miss Isabel Buckingham, vice president of the Washington Story League, spun the yarns for the children.

And parents who wish to join their children may fetch along the picnic basket and sup on the grounds.

Jerseyites to Meet

THE NEW JERSEY State Society of Washington is planning a gala affair for Monday. A dinner at the Fairfax Hotel will be followed by games and other entertainment. Miss Judy Trent of the Mount Vernon Players will give a series of brief sketches.

Ort Party Planned

A PARTY is in the offing for members of the Washington Chapter, American Ort. In fact, the club is meeting Tuesday at 11 a. m. at the home of Mrs. Emmett H. Markwood, 3208 Seventeenth Street Northwest. Purpose of the get-together is to complete plans for an outdoor party scheduled for July 25.

Several From Here At Georgia Resort

Several Washingtonians are registered at The Cloister in Sea Island, Ga., this week, among them being Lieut. and Mrs. Henry T. Holsapple, whose marriage took place here recently, Miss Mildred Gore, Miss Hazel Beall and C. W. Barnes.

Of interest to Sea Island visitors in the coming week will be the Bicentennial celebration of the Battle of Bloody Marsh. The ceremony will be held on the battlefield on St. Simons Island on Tuesday and tribute will be paid to Gen. James Edward Oglethorpe, founder of the colony and first Governor of Georgia.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife's Once-Great Love for Husband of Inferior Cultural Background Is Waning, Because He Has Failed Her Hope That He Would Outgrow Crudities

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I married a man who did not have the cultural background that I did. I was fully aware of this fact when I married him but I felt that he was intelligent and ambitious enough to learn the little amenities of life which help people to meet pleasantly and mingle agreeably. He is a good man and I have loved him dearly, but his constant breaches of etiquette are so disgusting that he is gradually becoming the object of my scorn.

I know schooled women who have married unschooled men and lived with them very happily; but these men were continually reading and otherwise educating themselves up to higher standards of knowledge and behavior. I expected my husband would undertake such a program of self-education when he married me. But from the time of our marriage I have never seen him with a book in his hand. He seems to have no interest in literature, current events, sports or anything that would make him an interesting companion. We have never once had a stimulating conversation.

He writes letters with a pencil and the sentence structure, punctuation and spelling are terrible. He often abbreviates words. When he writes to my family I am always embarrassed by the advertisement of his ignorance. His vocabulary is woefully inadequate; but what is worse, he doesn't care whether or not he expresses himself well. He doesn't know the right manner of escorting a woman into a theater or restaurant; nor even on and off a street car.

He gargles his soup and dunks the crackers. He blows his coffee and swishes it into his mouth. He doesn't hold his knife and fork correctly and he makes smacking noises when he eats. He wears his garments until they are so soiled I am ashamed of his appearance. His handkerchief is black with dirt before the end of the day. When he removes his socks, the odor is offensive. Often his hands are not entirely clean. Yet he will smoke, eat, rub his eyes or place his hands near his mouth without washing them.

There cannot be love without respect and I am losing all the respect I ever had for my husband, because every day the conviction grows stronger that I have a more alert and open mind, a wider scope of interests, a keener appreciation of the arts and sciences, and certainly better manners! He could be wonderful if he would try to improve himself; but in spite of my most subtle and tactful suggestions, he continues to be an uncouth clod. What hope is there for him?—and me?

ANNE.

Good Wife Fosters Husband's Growth

DEAR ANNE: Feeling as you do about your husband's noxious shortcomings, and in view of the fact that you two (by virtue of wedlock) are "one flesh," it seems to me that you have been weakly neglectful of your responsibility in the situation,—which is to relentlessly compel from him the more civilized brand of behavior you desire, the only brand that will satisfy you, and thus the one brand that is calculated to promote a better integrated relationship. Man's well known and ironic reference to his wife as his "better half" is not without foundation. When a man marries, almost invariably it is with the instinctive aspiration of "bettering himself," in the sense of achieving a personality-merger with a rare and radiant, wise and wonderful, invincibly and incorruptibly idealistic, indefatigably perfection-seeking creature,—who will somehow succeed in translating him into the admirable fellow he feels he could and should be.

And the wife who makes good a man's unconscious expectations in that regard is a gal who lets no grass grow under her feet in tackling the job. She takes to the pace-setter, standard-bearer role like a duck to water; and she holds her man in line with implacable firmness, wearing the velvet glove whenever possible, but making no apologies for the iron hand. In the event she has (as you say of yourself) "a more alert and open mind, a wider scope of interests, a keener appreciation of the arts and sciences, and certainly better manners," she wastes no time deploring the discrepancy. Not if she loves the man. She just gets busy, with an artist's boundless enthusiasm for working with promising material, applying her superior talents to the task of refurbishing her find. Though he struggle and protest against her "polishing" ministrations, she is nothing daunted. She has an air of knowing what she is about. Her attitude implies, "You just don't know the half of your own possibilities. But wait 'til I show you—" Etc.

Your attitude toward your husband is unwholesomely finicky and snobbish. You have thus far daintily refrained from doing a matter-of-fact gardening job on his essentially "good" personality for the reason that you have fallaciously assumed that his uncouth ways imply lack of "culture." It may help you to know that some men with the most impeccable "cultural background," enjoying positions of social and professional eminence, have table manners to compare with his; and a comparable lack of regard for immaculate grooming. Moreover, the typical mature-age "man's man"—which is to say, the man who is not a studiously charming ladies' man—seldom bothers to remember the Chesterfieldian rules for escorting a woman into a theater or restaurant or public conveyance. Usually he is artlessly dependent upon the little woman of his choice to engineer him through such intricacies; or to set him right (in spirit of good will) when he blunders badly.

Your reference to your husband's easy indifference to grimy garments recalls a humorously reflective remark once made in my hearing by a well-to-do, successful executive, holder of several university degrees and newly married. "Boy," he said, "if I'm not a beauty, it's not my wife's fault. My laundry bill is terrific. And she makes the cleaner do my suits over, if they're not just right. And I used to think I was all dressed up when I wore a new tie! It sure takes a woman to teach you." Also, I am reminded, offhand, of another professional man,—a scientist,—who, as a widower, was a seedy looking chap. Then he married a smart young career woman, and today (three years later) his tailoring and grooming are a treat to the eye.

If you had been sturdily forthright, instead of "subtly tactful" in treating the problem your husband's uncouth habits present, I daresay you would have wrought at least a 90 per cent improvement by now—in his manner, appearance and physical cleanliness. For instance, thrust a smooth-flowing fountain pen in his hand, when he starts to write letters. And say, "Let me see that masterpiece when you finish it. Your sentence structure, punctuation and spelling are so terrible you must be a genius. If I don't go over your letters and translate them into English, the message is lost to the world." When you set forth to a restaurant, tell him gaily: "Remember, sweetie, you are merely my husband. I go first and you follow me. The waiter leads the way." At the theater, if there is no usher showing seats, say: "You go first. I'll follow." If he takes you literally and proceeds straight to his seat, without pausing at the end of the row to let you enter first, squeeze his hand as you settle and say, "Remind me to tell you something when we get home."

When you are dining at home, give him a teasing burlesque of his soup-inhaling, coffee-blowing, lip-smacking performance at table. Say, "Two can play at this game, darling. I am drowning you out in self defense. Now, just listen. Don't I sound awful? Stop eating like Gargantua, for heaven's sake." Etc. About his garments and linens,—make it your business to get him into fresh apparel daily. Keep after him about his hands. Make him wash them before every meal; and, also, after soiling tasks. As for his malodorous feet,—that may be a hapless affliction requiring medical treatment, not proof of chronic uncleanliness. However, insist on nightly scrubbings and frequent change of hose,—superintending such rites,—but also get a doctor's diagnosis and prescription.

If he is amiably disinterested in reading, try reading to him. When you run across something in a book, magazine or newspaper that interests you, say, "Listen to this ——," and read it well, with clear and pleasing diction. Having finished, ask, "What do you think?" In his absence, mark challenging sentences or provocative news items with blue pencil, and call them to his attention when he is at leisure. Since he is not a moron, he has the active intelligence that spawns ideas; and if you are as smart as you think you are, you can find ways of persuading him to communicate his ideas to you. But are you that smart? Is it possible that he finds you dull? And that he is as bored with you by now as you are wearily annoyed with him?

It's About Time

IT's ABOUT TIME to consider building your wardrobe, for this and future summers, around the colors red, white and blue. The blue can range from ice blue to navy. Limit the red to accessories and stick to one bright shade

Hip Fullness Heralds Fall

Even in these uncertain times designers cling to their old technique of introducing styles during the summer months that they expect to carry over into fall. Above is shown the type of summer print to be seen in solid crepes for fall. The skirt has a front panel which is given a jabot-like treatment —indicative of the coming hip drape. Actress Joan Fontaine wears this frock in sea foam green, printed with yellow and white daisies and huge rosy poppies frosted in white. Other fall trends to look for are the short peplum, peg top skirts in dresses, trouser, hip, "Monk" and slant-pocket skirt fullness. These are to be especially noted in the one-piece dress which has assumed new importance with the WPB ban on jacket dresses

Let Man of House Select Vacation Spot This Year

By Ida Jean Kain

IF THERE ever was a time when the head of the house deserved the right to pick the family vacation spot, this is the year. Why not surprise him and say:

"This is your vacation, dear. Where shall we go? All I ask is that we keep the expenses down!"

When he recovers and mentions that little camping and fishing trip he has been angling for—for about six summers—go right along with him without a murmur. Anything to get his mind off priorities and things.

You've been staying home and minding the children day in and night in, and you're just aching to go some place where they dress for dinner and dance until breakfast. But your husband is the one to be considered this year. If he gets a vacation it is because he really needs one and must come back to the job feeling fit.

This isn't the time to be taking an expensive trip, anyway. Buy your stamps and bonds before you go away. You might think it would not matter if you skip buying one month's quota, but we can't afford to let our war effort go into a summer slump. There wouldn't be any vacations in Mr. Hitler's world—not for us.

Real Americans

Any time off—two weeks, one, or a weekend—is so much velvet. In many of the defense plants the men are being asked to stay on the job and to take double pay instead of a rest. One of the defense workers' wives promptly said to her husband, "Let's take that extra money and put it into extra bonds!" And he said, "O. K!" There's a couple of real Americans!

My hat's off again to the school teachers who will spend this summer working on farms to grow more of the protective foods we all need, and to the high school boys and girls who are going to be in there pitching hay, too! The farmers have been hard hit for labor. They can use all the help they can get.

Try This Routine For Tired Feet

Wear the right size shoe and you'll prevent many an aching back and that too-tired-to-go-out-tonight feeling. These days when everyone is doing so much volunteer defense work in addition to running a household or holding down a regular job, particular attention should be paid to wearing the most comfortable clothes—especially shoes.

One authority claims that most people should wear a size larger and two sizes wider than they do. If you can insert your forefinger between your heel and the back of your shoe, then you may be sure your shoes are large enough to allow your feet to stretch.

Walking correctly is as important as wearing the proper shoes, believes C. B. S. Actress Joan ("Valiant Lady") Blaine, who walks at least 2 miles a day to keep fit. But, as she points out, unless one walks correctly no benefit at all is derived from the effort. When walking, most of your weight should be borne on the forward part of the foot. When standing, allow most of your weight to rest on the heels.

We'll bet if you follow these methods, there'll be no more leg cramps, back pains, short temper or fagged-out feeling.

Cold Weather Clothes

QUERY—I shall be working during a Washington winter for the first time this year. Previously I have been employed in Florida or on the West during the winter months. Since none of my clothes are of the cold weather variety, I shall have to furnish an entire wardrobe. I must also have a coat as my fur coat is six years old and would not be good enough for wear here. It was not an expensive coat in the first place. What do you think are the most necessary items to include?

ANSWER—If you wish to take advantage of July and August fur sales, which mean a substantial saving, it would be well for you to consider a fur coat immediately. Government rulings say if you buy a fur coat (this also applies to any purchase) on the lay-away plan any type of deposit can be made (10—20 per cent is usually asked) with 12 months to complete the payments. If you plan to buy the coat and take it with you, one-third down-payment must be made. In any event you could have a goodly percentage of your coat paid for before time to purchase the rest of your wardrobe. For the business girl a good muskrat coat—preferably sable dyed because she would not tire of it so easily—is about the most practical buy. This coat might be worn for day or evening.

Jane Driscoll

As a backlog to the rest of the wardrobe a two-piece suit is the answer. A box coat, matching the suit as nearly as possible (WPB says no more three-piece suits sold together), will answer for purposes the fur coat will not fill. In addition, a two-piece dressy wool and a functional classic one-piece dress should be enough to start the season. As we go into winter, you can add more to your wardrobe when the budget permits and the occasion demands.

Men Versus Slacks

QUERY—As a man I should like to ask a question that has been bothering me for a long time, "Why do most women look so terrible in slacks? I am not opposed to trousers on women, but so few are becoming to the feminine half."

ANSWER—Since you do not object to the idea of slacks on women (and fortunately, because it looks as if women were headed towards them for several years to come), it must be the fit that annoys you. Most large women buy slacks too tight and many slim women purchase them too baggy.

A happy medium can be reached, however, in the purchase of slacks. One man makes this suggestion. He points out that a man always has his clothes tailored to fit. Men are seldom able to put trousers on and wear them without some slight alteration. He believes women ought to observe this same degree of perfect fit if they are going to enter into a man's realm of dress. And he also thinks women might be more discriminating as to where they wear slacks as they are essentially a sport item. In this man's opinion at the theater or in a restaurant is no place for them.

(If a woman is smart she will realize that this latter objection is only reasonable. Men like to see women dress like women. It takes some of the edge off of feminine charm if they have to look on women first as their equal in dress and afterwards as women. The woman who knows "what every woman knows" will keep her slacks for utilitarian or strictly sport purposes if she would have and hold.

Last Year's Fur Coat

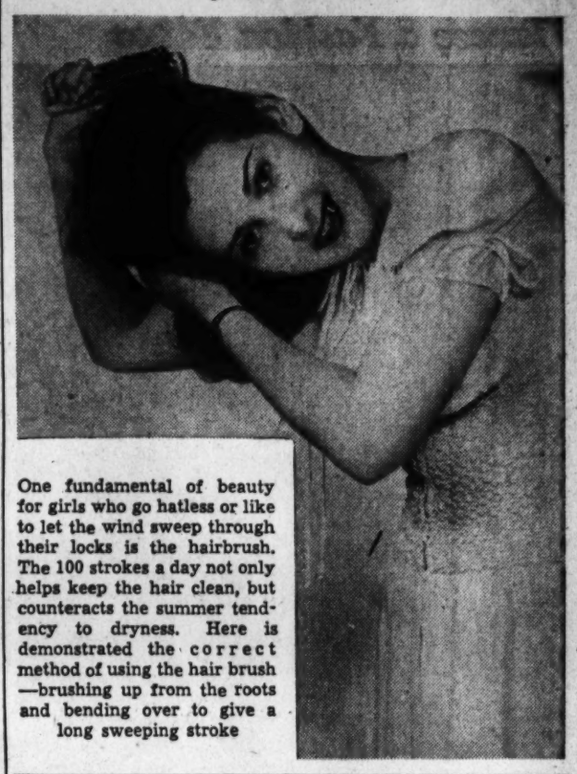
QUERY—I have been going over my closet to find old clothes that can be made over for use this winter, in preference to discarding them for new garments. A full length lapin coat I have might see another winter's wear if it were made into a long cape. Is this advisable?

ANSWER—Yes, lapin is a fur that might be made over very successfully into a cape. Furriers do not advise a strictly sport fur such as raccoon being used, however. With the exception of perhaps skunk (which may be either a sport or dress fur), one authority suggests that flat furs are a better choice for makeover possibilities. The length, too, should be considered. A fur coat cannot just be cut down. It has to be cut away, reblocked and reworked. A cape should be styled about hip length to get the best results.

Clothes-Hanger Trick

Ginger Rogers says your clothes will stay in shape, wear longer, if you keep them on padded hangers when they are not in use. And she means padded — her hangers being some two inches thick. Stitched inside the padding, a faint hint of spicy scent—a fresh whiff from a spice garden both for the frocks and the cupboard.

If You Carry Your Hat—Brush!



One fundamental of beauty for girls who go hatless or like to let the wind sweep through their locks is the hairbrush. The 100 strokes a day not only helps keep the hair clean, but counteracts the summer tendency to dryness. Here is demonstrated the correct method of using the hair brush—brushing up from the roots and bending over to give a long sweeping stroke

Tie Fashions Gain Popularity

Hollywood, Calif.—Tied fashions are growing in importance as a natural result of metal shortages. Buttons that require a metal base and slide fasteners are rapidly disappearing from the market.

Both Orry-Kelly and Milo Anderson, Warner Brothers designers, are not discouraged, however. As Orry-Kelly says, "The more restrictions, the more innovations in designing."

For proof, both Orry-Kelly and Anderson offer the tie fashion, which eliminates the need of slide fasteners and buttons that serve the purpose of utility.

In a new movie Orry-Kelly has done a very smart tie dress for Ida Lupino. It combines black crepe with a silk print showing an all-over pattern of tiny bright blue diamonds on a wine background. The pencil slim skirt of the crepe features a sash that ties a wide V over the left hip. The long-sleeved blouse of the print material has a surplice front with ties that loop through the skirt sash and end in a bow and streamers.

For Brenda Marshall, Anderson has designed a chic suit in two colors. The slim skirt of olive green is topped with a fitted jacket of brown. Two loopholes are cut at the natural waistline for the front closing. Through these Anderson has tied a bow of the green material to draw the jacket together.

"maybe NOW I'll never have to hire anybody again," sighed Mr. Jordan

IT was the Fourth of July. It was Independence Day. But poor Mr. Jordan felt anything but independent. He felt more like a slave, which in truth he was—to his business.

"Oh, I'm tired of slaving alone," he suddenly cried, "and I'm tired of trying to HIRE people. It just can't be done!" Then he added: "But THIS can . . ."

He found a giant firecracker and fastened it to his back. "Maybe NOW I'll never have to hire anybody again," he sighed. "Hey, mister, got a match?"

The gentleman thus addressed turned around. "A match," he said. "An even match for your problem, my friend, is a Help Wanted Ad in The Washington Post. That paper gets action every time! And stop playing with firecrackers. They're dangerous."

Mr. Jordan smiled and said, "Thank you." He went home, called a Post Ad-writer at NAtional 4200.

And did his Post Want Ad get action? It certainly did—with a bang!

White House Announces:

Hopkins to Wed Third Time; Fiancee a Fashion Editor

MRS. LOUISE MACY

The engagement of Harry Hopkins, lend-lease administrator, and Mrs. Louise Macy, 36-year-old New York divorcee and fashion authority, was announced yesterday by Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early, and Mrs. Macy said in New York that they would be married "in about a month."

The announcement put an end to rumors that Hopkins was going to marry Paulette Goddard, screen actress and former wife of Charlie Chaplin.

Early declined to say whether the wedding would take place in the White House or whether the couple would make their home at the Executive Mansion, resident of the 52-year-old "assistant President" and his 10-year-old daughter, Diana, for the last two years.

"As yet neither the time nor the place has been decided," the President's secretary said.

Announcing the engagement in behalf of Hopkins, Early said: "If Mr. Hopkins were in Washington today he would be happy to tell you in person of his engagement . . . He and Mrs. Macy will be married at an early date."

Early did not divulge the whereabouts of the No. 1 aide and close personal friend of Mr. Roosevelt, whose official title is special assistant to the President.

The bride-to-be, who was married in 1932 to Clyde Brown, jr., a railroad attorney, but divorced him 10 months later and reassumed her maiden name, said she had met Hopkins about six months ago through their mutual friends, Mr. and Mrs. W. Averell Harriman. Harriman is a lend-lease official.

A native of Pasadena, Calif., Mrs. Macy came to Washington at the age of 15 to attend school and later was graduated froh Smith College.

Known to her friends as a confirmed career woman, she was Paris editor of the fashion magazine, Harper's Bazaar, when France fell in June of 1940.

Then a group of Americans and other nationals in France who organized to fight the Nazis chose her as their godmother, "Marianne." Returning to New York, Mrs. Macy brought news of the suffering of Belgian and Dutch refugees in Paris.

At that time gossips linked her name with that of Jock Whitney, millionaire sportsman who was later divorced from Mary Elizabeth Altemus (Liz) Whitney, the horsewoman. Previously she had been seen frequently in the company of Robert Benchley, the humorist.

Whitney married Betsy Cushing Roosevelt, former wife of the President's oldest son, James.

Lately Mrs. Macy has been active in war work as a nurses' aide at Memorial Hospital in New York City.

"You know Mr. Hopkins is a very busy man," she told reporters, "and we haven't had an opportunity to discuss wedding plans fully. We definitely will be married in about a month, however. I expect to see Mr. Hopkins over the weekend and perhaps we can then decide."

She said she hoped to become a nurses' aide in a Washington hospital after her marriage.

"I want to continue my work," she explained. "I'm extremely interested in it. I'm still interested in fashion, but I have little time for it now. Nursing is my one occupation."

A tall, slender woman with deep blue eyes and brown hair, Mrs. Macy is known by associates as a hard worker with an unusual talent of getting along with people.

The lanky, chain-smoking Hopkins, former professional baseball player and social worker, was first married in 1912 to Ethel Gross, secretary of Christadora House, a social service establishment in New York City, and they had two sons, David and Stephen, before she divorced him in 1930. In 1931 he married Barbara Duncan and to them was born Diana, now a favorite of President and Mrs. Roosevelt. The second Mrs. Hopkins died in 1937.

Hopkins met Mr. Roosevelt in 1928 when Mr. Roosevelt was running for Governor of New York. Their friendship blossomed during Hopkins' service under Mr. Roosevelt as New York State relief director, national relief administrator and Secretary of Commerce.

Since 1940, when Hopkins resigned as Secretary of Commerce because of ill health, the President has concentrated on "putting Harry back together again," as the Chief Executive once expressed it, by giving him a variety of vital and interesting behind-the-scenes jobs.

The "assistant President" is said to be in good health now.

Damonte Taborda Faces 2d 'Affair of Honor' After Chamber Clash

DAMONTE TABORDA

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, July 3.—A teacup-hurling episode in the Chamber of Deputies prompted Raul Damonte Taborda, chairman of Argentina's "Dies Committee," to challenge a political foe to duel today.

Damonte Taborda hurled his challenge at Reynaldo Pastor, Conservative leader, who had thrown a badly aimed cup at the committee chairman's head yesterday in the climax of an angry verbal clash. The cup missed Damonte Taborda but hit a fellow Radical.

Pastor apologized to the chamber but refused to apologize to Damonte Taborda. Seconds of the two must arrange a duel place and decide upon the time.

Pastor will confront a dangerous adversary when they meet, for on last February 24 Damonte Taborda fought a dual so valiantly that it made him a national hero.

He met Enrique Rottjer, a hot-tempered former army colonel, fighting with a weapon chosen by Rottjer, and with which Demonte Taborda had had no experience. The instruments of battle were sabres, blunt at the ends and sharpened on both sides of the blades.

Demonte Taborda is tall and spare, Rottjer short and fat. They slashed viciously without any feeling-out skirmishes and blood flowed immediately. Their forearms were drenched with it. In the third two-minute round the four attending doctors stopped the duel, declaring Rottjer was not in condition to continue. The combatants left the field unreconciled.

Rottjer, whom Taborda had called a crapulous person in a speech, was the aggrieved party. He was wounded in the chest, on the right forearm, and on the right wrist. Taborda suffered a scratch on the right shoulder and a bruise on the right upper arm.

The presence of a detective among the 20 witnesses caused a momentary stir, since dueling is punishable by a year in jail, but it was quickly explained that he was there as a dueling fan, not as a policeman.

Like Rottjer, Pastor will have the choice of weapons, since it is he who has been challenged.

Senate Unit Approves Court Slate

Chamber Expected To Get Municipal Bench Nominations Report Monday

By Robert W. Harvey
Post Staff Writer

A Senate Judiciary Subcommittee yesterday approved the entire slate of eight nominations for the District's new Municipal Court system, making confirmation by the Senate early next week virtually certain.

The full committee will meet at 10 a. m. Monday to pass on the subcommittee's recommendation, and the nominations are slated for presentation to the Senate the same day.

It will take a unanimous consent order to bring final Senate action Monday, however, since Senate rules provide that nominations must be placed on the printed calendar before they can be acted upon, and this would delay action until Tuesday.

It was reported that an effort would be made to suspend the rule, however, since until the appointments are confirmed, the new court must operate with only a partial organization.

The Slate as Approved

The slate approved yesterday names William E. Richardson to the chief judgeship of the Municipal Court of Appeals, with Nathan Cayton and Andrew McCaughrin Hood as associate appellate justices.

George P. Barse would be chief judge of the merged lower court, Walter J. Casey would continue on the Police Court—now criminal division—bench, while Brice Clagett, Nathan Ross Margold and Aubrey B. Fennell would be added to the list of Police and Municipal Court judges now in office.

Sporadic opposition to the nominations of Casey and Cayton was voiced again at subcommittee hearings yesterday morning.

The Washington Bar Association, Negro lawyers' group, reasserted its protest against Casey's appointment on the ground that he was prejudiced against Negroes. Members of the association—Henry Lincoln Johnson, jr., George A. Parker and William A. Powell—testified concerning three cases in which they had been involved and which they claimed afforded evidence to support their charge.

Casey's Denial Supported

Casey himself appeared before the subcommittee and, though declining to make any detailed statement, categorically denied that he entertained any such prejudice.

His denial was supported by other attorneys who testified, several of them colored. Among those who urged his appointment was C. D. Artis, corresponding secretary of the Washington Bar Association, who stated that he could not agree with his organization's stand. Several Negro lawyers had also supported him Thursday.

In addition to the numerous lawyers who appeared in his behalf, Casey's confirmation was urged by J. C. Noel, who said that he had served as a juryman under Casey last spring. He said that he and his fellow jurymen had been so impressed with Casey's conduct and ability that they had sent a petition to the Attorney General boosting him for chief judge of the new court.

Only One Opposes Cayton

Only one witness yesterday opposed the nomination of Cayton, seconding the objections raised at Thursday's hearings by Leonard J. Ganse, local attorney. The witness was Mrs. Mary Johnson, who accused him of being biased in favor of poor or laboring class litigants. Citing two cases in which she had been involved, she declared that "There's no fairness from Judge Cayton if he thinks that you have a dollar."

All others who appeared supported Cayton's appointment, though one witness testified that he had twice been the victim of allegedly unfair decisions by Cayton. He said that he was not opposing his nomination, however.

Those who appeared in behalf of both men included Austin F. Canfield, Thomas M. David, T. Edward O'Connell, Thomas E. Rhodes, Walter M. Shea, Wilbert M. McInerney and Milton Lewis, all attorneys.

New Court Is Operating

Senators McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, Murdock (Democrat) of Utah and Burton (Republican) of Ohio made up the subcommittee that took testimony on the appointments.

Meanwhile, the new Municipal Court is operating under the rules of procedure that applied to the old Police and Municipal Courts, out of which it grew. New rules will be adopted after Senate confirmation of the nominations.

Eight judges from the defunct Police and Municipal Courts are sitting as the new tribunal. They are Judges Ellen K. Raedy, Nathan Cayton, Walter J. Casey, John P. McMahon, Hobart Newman, George D. Nielson, Armond W. Scott and Robert E. Mattingly.

Upon appointment of four jurists to the court, Mattingly will retire and Cayton will take up his post in the new created Municipal Court of Appeals, if he receives the confirmation by the Senate.

Army Relaxes Rules On Officer Candidates

Commanding generals may now designate soldiers to attend Officer Candidates Schools in recognition of demonstrated fitness or meritorious service, Secretary Stimson said yesterday. Men so picked will not have to go before the usual boards of officers which select soldiers for the schools.

Pilots and mechanics for the Field Artillery's "grasshopper" air force of small observation planes will be chosen from officers and men of the Army Ground Forces. Pilots will be selected from among officers and men who hold CAA private pilot licenses.

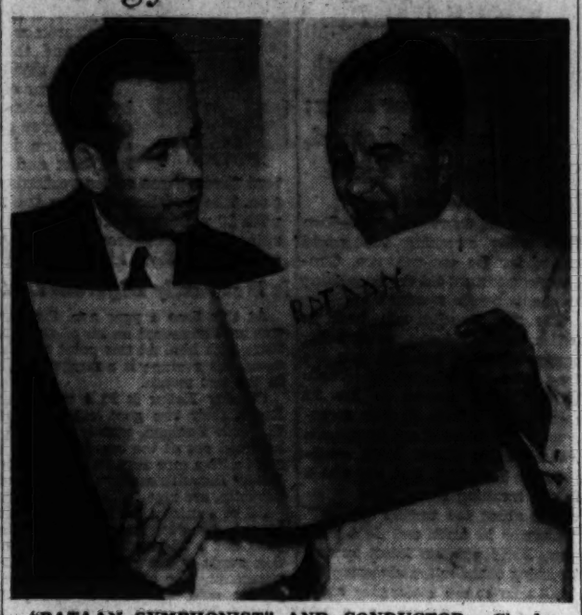
Composer Leads Symphony In Elegy for Men of Bataan



"BATAAN SYMPHONIST" AND CONDUCTOR — Charles O'Connell, guest conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra at last night's Watergate concert, looks over the score of "Bataan," with Hal McDonald, symphonist.

By Ray C. B. Brown

Charles O'Connell conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the seventy-second "Sunset Symphony" concert at the Potomac Watergate on Friday night. Guest conductor: Harl McDonald. Soloists: Mary Lida Bowen and Elwood Gary. Program of compositions by Benjamin, Dubenski, Herbert, McBride, Guion, Lecuona, Gould, Cailliet, McDonald and Bodge.

With no omens of storm in sight around the circle of the horizon, music lovers made their way to the Potomac Watergate and filled its spacious reaches to the number of 10,000 last evening for the seventy-second summer concert which the National Symphony Orchestra has played at the picturesque site. The sky was cloudless, an atmospheric haze subdued the sunset colors to nacreous tints over the Virginia hills, and a soft breeze idled down the river for the refreshment of the auditors. Everything was conducive to the relaxed state of mind which is the essential mood for enjoyment of music as entertainment and not as a problem in counterpoint or as an essay in aesthetic philosophy.

BROWN

The climax of the program arranged by Charles O'Connell, who made his first appearance of the summer as conductor, was Harl McDonald's tone-poem, "Bataan," performed for the first time anywhere under the composer's direction. Broadcast by short wave to Gen. Douglas MacArthur and the American armed services, the premiere was not only circumstantially impressive but emotionally moving. The composition is not the ordinary occasional piece of descriptive music decorated with obvious tricks, but a sincerely felt tribute to heroes who are writing contemporary history.

Elegiac in character, "Bataan" evokes no visions of the battlefield save in the rhythm of marching men and the sounds of bugles. One is aware that its fundamentally tragic undertone speaks of a conflict as spiritual as it is material, of a struggle between ideologies in which the victory went to the defenders and not to the temporary conquerors. Skillfully written, as are Dr. McDonald's works in general, this tone poem has permanent values as an artistic product of a war period.

In building his program, Mr. O'Connell may have had in mind the fact that it was to be performed on the eve of Independence Day, for he drew almost exclusively upon composers of the United States with a friendly reach into Canada and Cuba for pieces by Arthur Benjamin and Ernesto Lecuona. It began with Benjamin's lively and chattering "Overture to an Italian Comedy," which was followed by an excellent fantasia on Stephen Foster melodies by Arcadi Dubenski, the Russian-American composer, whose writing is not only technically clever but musically substantial.

The evening's soloists were two young Baltimorean singers, Mary Lida Bowen and Elwood Gary, the latter a recent recruit of the Metropolitan Opera through radio auditions. They were heard in solos and duets from five of Victor Herbert's 46 light operas: "Eileen," "Naughty Marietta," "The Only Girl," "The Red Mill" and "The Encounterfoil to Mr. Gary's resonant pleasing soprano voice was a chantress." Miss Bowen's fresh and and admirably projected tenor.

Victor Herbert was also represented by his "American Fantasy." The other Americana on the program included Robert McBride's amusing "Fugato on a Well-Known Theme," David Guion's elaboration of "Turkey in the Straw," Lecuona's "Andalucia," Morton Gould's "Pavane" and Lucien Cailliet's variations on "Pop Goes the Weasel." As a finale was affixed Bodge's "Salute to Our Fighting Forces," a medley of service tunes.

D. C. Hospital Expansion Plan Revised

Temporary Pavilions Planned for More Beds Instead of Nurses' Dormitories

Temporary pavilions for hospital beds will be built at Georgetown, Garfield, Columbia and Children's Hospitals, instead of the temporary nurses dormitories proposed two weeks ago, Commissioner Guy Mason announced last night.

The changed decision resulted from a report of a committee appointed to study a plan to move nurses out of the hospitals and convert their quarters into wards. The committee found it would be cheaper to erect pavilions for patients than for nurses, because the latter would entail the additional expense of remodeling the former dormitories.

A shortage of 220 nurses in Washington hospitals also was disclosed in the report of the general Civilian Defense health committee, which included records of progress of the various subcommittees assigned to District problems. Better wages and working conditions for nurses were recommended as the most effective means of remedying the shortage. Mason was told that hospital superintendents would welcome suggestions for standardizing wages and hours for nurses.

Day Nurseries Urged

Other steps recommended included establishment of day nurseries for children of married nurses so these mothers, otherwise obligated to stay at home, would be free to return to hospital duty. Increased use of Red Cross nurse aides and the development of training centers also were advised.

The committee agreed that it was not practical for the five hospitals which have discontinued training schools to reopen them because of the present shortage of help in all fields and the difference in wages received by nurses in private and in Government service.

Although the $32,500,000 war housing bill to finance the new hospital wings was signed yesterday, Mason could not predict when the actual work of expanding the hospital facilities would be begun. That, he said, is up to the FWA.

Another survey must be made before any specific plans can be made, he said. Mason proposes to centralize all indigent patients at Gallinger Hospital, thus increasing the capacity of the private hospitals. Before the addition for Gallinger can be planned in detail, he said, the approximate number of hospital days given to charity patients that must be absorbed at Gallinger should be determined.

Survey Is Required

The same number of patients—35 at Georgetown and 47 each at Columbia and Garfield—who would have been accommodated by evacuating the nurses, will be housed in the temporary pavilions. The Georgetown nurses were to have been moved to the old Thiekeld School at Thirty-sixth and Prospect Streets Northwest, but District engineers found the building could not be repaired economically.

A subcommittee on protection of food and milk supply urged that arrangements be made for passing food and milk trucks through the streets during blackouts or air raids. A committee on venereal disease control said an inspector had been sent to the nearby training camps to discover local contacts and to cooperate with military police stationed in the District. This committee also complained of lack of cooperation by the corporation counsel's office in prosecuting cases of infected persons who neglect treatment.

Taxi Strike Vote Slated Next Week

Drivers Also Will Decide on Petition Asking Removal of Hankin From PUC

A two-day strike vote for taxicab drivers on Monday and Tuesday was ordered by the cab union last night, bringing to a head a fortnight of dispute between the union and the Public Utilities Commission that has raged since the 18-hour strike of June 24.

The drivers also will vote on a petition to oust PUC Chairman Gregory Hankin, whose personal exchanges with Edward A. Glenn, union president, have high-lighted the dispute over the new rates and zones ordered into effect June 15.

Immediately after the strike vote was called, the PUC announced that "an informal conference will be held Wednesday with representatives of the taxicab industry for the purpose of outlining the steps to be taken in the commission's review of its zone and rate order." This review was agreed upon last week after Congressional intervention had called a temporary halt to the cab strike.

Glenn's statement to the drivers read: "There will be a meeting of the taxicab drivers of the District of Columbia at 808 I Street Northwest Monday and Tuesday, July 6-7, for the purpose of voting upon the action to be taken to enforce the settlement of the present difficulties as they relate to zones, rates and other matters and more particularly to the removal of Mr. Hankin as a member of the Public Utilities Commission."

There will be three ballots for the drivers to vote upon, Glenn said. One will ask whether the driver wants the new PUC zone system, with a 30-40-60-80-cent basic zone rate and 21 sub-zones, or the union-proposed 30-50-70-90-cent rates with the old zone boundaries. A second ballot will ask whether the driver wants Hankin retained in office, and the third whether he wants to employ the "vacation" method of obtaining those ends.

Hankin, although refusing to "be drawn into the controversy," said that one purpose of the Wednesday conference would be to determine who was qualified to speak for the drivers.

When the meeting was announced as a closed one, Glenn replied, "In that case I don't know whether I'll even attend. The reporters should certainly be there to tell the public what goes on at these PUC meetings."

Steps Taken to Avert Milk Drivers' Strike

Efforts to avert a strike of 1350 union milk truck drivers and plant workers, which would paralyze milk deliveries in the entire metropolitan area, were under way yesterday.

The workers, members of the Milk Drivers and Dairy Employes, Local No. 246, A. F. of L., voted 939 to 56 in favor of the strike. They empowered the union's executive committee and business agent to call the walkout if negotiations for a settlement break down. Every dairy in the city would be affected.

Eugene R. Hubbard, union secretary-treasurer and business agent, said the dispute is over a new contract. Under it, workers seek a general wage increase of $9 and a reduction in hours for drivers from 54 to 48 a week. Minimums under the old contract, which expires Tuesday, were $41 for regular drivers, $28 for special delivery drivers and $31.50 for plant workers.

"There will be no strike until there is a complete breakdown," Hubbard said last night. "It may take a day, a week or longer to iron out matters. However, we are going ahead and are hopeful that a settlement can be reached."

Hubbard said a meeting will be held Monday at the Washington Hotel between the five-man dairy industry committee, headed by Herman Schulteis, and the executive committee of the union. He added that in the event a strike is called, hospitals, the armed forces and other such milk users will get deliveries.

Howard T. Colvin, commissioner, United States Conciliation Service, Department of Labor, said his office had not been called in to aid in settling the dispute.

"We have been notified of it," he said, "and I understand the negotiations are on the most friendly basis. Everyone is hopeful there will be no strike."

Ship Docks Here Laden With Southern Watermelons

Word that the melons were in spread about the waterfront and little boys came to the Joyce Sterling and drooled.

The melons arrived in the delicacy class. A good melon costs around $1, a jump from 75 and 80 cent prices of last year. Charge it up to peanuts. Blame it on the war.

Growers, because of the war, have concentrated on things more essential to the food supply. Millions may argue that watermelons are in that category. But anyhow, according to the Department of Agriculture, acreage in the second early stage was off 25 per cent, due partly to the expanded peanut program in the South; acreage was off about 16 per cent in the late stage and was down 20 per cent in the early stage.

But they're statistics. The point is Georgia melons came through yesterday and North Carolina melons are expected by boat very soon now. Cap'n Marshall is looking forward to fencing the deck of the Joyce Sterling and bringing in some 5000 if the public shows the taste for melons it used to have.

Subway Plan Not Feasible, Report Says

City Not Adapted To Underground Transit, Whitehurst Study Sets Forth

The long-awaited Whitehurst report on the feasibility of a subway system in the District was sent to Congress yesterday, turning thumbs down on the building of rapid-transit subways in the city.

The report—ordered last March by Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland, House District Committee member—did recommend as a transportation remedy the use of tunnels and underpasses for both street-car and vehicular traffic.

The report recommended in place of the subway proposal

1. That a systematic program be launched to correct traffic conditions which would include the underpasses and tunnels to relieve street and intersection congestion, terminals in the downtown area, and the rerouting of mass transportation lines.

2. That a further and more detailed survey be authorized to determine costs and locations, with an appropriation of $50,000 to finance the investigation.

Reasons given for rejecting the subway idea were that it was not adapted to the layout of the city and that the burden of traffic congestion was centered in the relatively small downtown area.

The area of greatest congestion was said to lie in the Northwest section between Seventeenth Street, Sixth Street, K Street and Pennsylvania Avenue.

"Rail and bus lines," the report stated, "have in many cases reached the point of saturation. An examination of the flow charts of mass transportation in this area is convincing that some corrective measures must be promptly taken to improve the situation."

It warned, however, that plans for the permanent improvement of the city's transportation system should be based upon normal needs and not upon "abnormal or emergency conditions such as we are confronted with at present."

The report recommended that most of the permanent construction be delayed until the emergency was past, urging that necessary surveys and investigations be undertaken now, however. Rerouting could be utilized as an immediate remedy, he said.

Medical Group Says Practice Is Not a Trade

By the Associated Press

The American Medical Association contended yesterday in a petition filed with the Supreme Court that practicing medicine is a profession and not a trade and hence the organization cannot be guilty of violating the Sherman antitrust law by alleged activities against a group health association in the District of Columbia.

Joined by the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, the organization sought a Supreme Court review of a decision by the United States Court of Appeals here holding them guilty and sustaining a $2500 fine against the national association and $1500 against the local society.

Explaining that the Sherman Act prohibits the "restraint of trade," the association asserted that Supreme Court decisions have held that the liberal arts, the learned professions, baseball, and the practice of law did not constitute "trade" within the meaning of the antitrust legislation.

Police Seeking Man Who Fled Prison Escort

Police and United States deputy marshals were still searching last night for Jack H. Fretz, 33, who escaped yesterday while being escorted to a District Court for arraignment on a grand larceny charge.

Fretz, who was indicted with two others, is believed to have slipped from a group on its way through a Police Court corridor in the custody of deputy marshals. Police gave his last known address as 521 Fourteenth Street Southeast.

The others who were to have been arraigned with Fretz are John N. Drumheller and Wesley C. Montague.

When Sam Silverman, clerk of Justice T. Alan Goldsborough's court, called the names yesterday morning only Drumheller and Montague stepped forward.

Fretz was arrested June 19 by Policeman F. E. Davis of the Second Precinct and charged with stealing a steamer trunk containing clothing from an automobile. He has been arrested about 45 other times.

Climber Survives Three-Story Fall

Daniel J. Handrich, 48, was recovering at Emergency Hospital last night from injuries suffered in a three-story fall from a ladder in the rear of 1733 Fourteenth Street Northwest yesterday.

He was attempting to reach a third-story window, witnesses told police, when the ladder slipped. He fell against several teephone wires, which broke his fall and saved him from more serious injury. He received a slight concussion and a hand injury.

According to police, Handrich lives at 512 Sheridan Street Northwest, and is employed at the Albers Laboratories at 1735 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

Gunda, Indian Rhino, Makes Belated Claim for Recognition

A hefty two-ton Indian rhinoceros named Gunda was the subject of a belated claim by Washington Zoo officials yesterday for recognition from "certain" friends of the animal kingdom.

Gunda, which is Indian for rhinoceros, would have continued to live his blissful life of relative anonymity if it were not for a casual remark about an article in the June 6 issue of the Saturday Evening Post which said that the St. Louis zoo had the only male Indian rhino "now doing time."

Zoo Director W. M. Mann was quick to comment, good naturedly but nevertheless emphatically: "And we've had him since 1939. What's more, I think he's best of the lot."

Apologizing for his natural partiality, Dr. Mann pointed out that there are Indian rhinos also in Philadelphia and New York. Ringling, he added for general information, had one hitting the circus rounds for 23 years.

As for Gunda, now five years old and thriving exceptionally well in his synthetic jungle creek at the United States National Zoo here, he was a gift from the forestry department of the government of Assam, British India.

Dr. Mann said he believes Gunda is probably the youngest in captivity in this country. Harry of the St. Louis zoo is probably a couple of years older, Dr. Mann said. But whether they are here or there, the Indian rhinos are still considered rare, he declared.

While discussing Gunda, Dr. Mann volunteered a bit of philogical elaboration of the word Gunda: "It also means 'tough guy' if you pronounce it with a short 'u.'

"But you could never pronounce it that way and refer to our fellow here—all he does is soak and soak."

Al Hailey, Post Sports Writer, Wins Army Air Force Wings

Trained in Cavalry, Newsman Transferred To Ride Whirlwind

First Lieut. Albon Hailey, 26-year-old former Washington Post writer, yesterday became the first Post employe to win his pilot's wings in the present war.

A reserve officer in the Cavalry since graduation from the University of Georgia in 1936, Hailey was called to active duty as a first lieutenant last July and immediately transferred to the Air Force. Completing 30 weeks of training, he received his wings yesterday at Spence Field, Moultrie, Ga. He will be a fighter pilot.

Hailey joined the city news staff of The Post in the summer of 1938 after a year with the Atlanta Constitution. The following January he transferred to the sports department, subsequently writing about every athletic pursuit from football to pigeon racing. He covered the 1940 season of the Washington Redskins football team.

The young aviator was born and schooled at Athens, Ga. He is unmarried.

NLRB Asked To Settle Feud Over Pavers

Local C. I. O. officials yesterday tossed a "hot potato" at the National Labor Relations Board by asking it to determine whether 1400 Washington street pavers want to belong to the newly created pro-Murray United Paving and Building Supply Workers Local Industrial Union, No. 1221, or to the Lewis dominated District 50, of the United Mine Workers.

This local action was a direct result of the bitter feud now raging between Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O., and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers and predecessor of Murray as C. I. O. president.

In a petition for certification, Sidney B. Katz, field representative of the C. I. O., stated that District paving contractors "maintain an attitude that they are uncertain as to who in fact does represent the men and have refused to bargain with the United Paving and Building Supply Workers."

C. I. O. Dissolved Union

The pavers were all members of Local 30 of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, C. I. O., a group that was dissolved by the C. I. O. recently after Lewis ousted Murray as vice president of the United Mine Workers. A. D. Lewis transferred all his construction workers locals to District 50 of the United Mine Workers. District 50 is a catch-all union for coke, chemical, gas, cosmetics and dairymen unions. Miss Kathryn Lewis, daughter of John L., is secretary-treasurer of District 50.

Immediate NLRB action was expected to be limited to the holding of a hearing on the question. The holding of an election among the pavers to determine their collective bargaining representative was viewed as a distinct possibility in view of past NLRB practices.

New Local Chartered

According to the petition which Katz sent by registered mail to the Baltimore office of the NLRB, the members of Local 30, had unanimously voted to affiliate directly with the C. I. O. instead of with the U. M. W. Local No. 1221 was chartered by the C. I. O. national office to accept the members of old Local 30, he stated. However, he pointed out, District 50 now claims to represent the men and to be a party to a contract signed by local paving contractors with old Local 30.

In separate letters to the nine local contractors involved, Katz notified them of the C. I. O.'s position in the dispute and asked them to stop sending union dues deducted from the men's pay checks under the contract to District 50.

The Lewis-Murray feud also broke out in Ohio yesterday with Ted F. Silvey, secretary-treasurer of the Ohio C. I. O. Industrial Union Council, denouncing efforts of John Owens, U. M. W. official, to withdraw the membership of the Ohio District of the United Mine Workers from the State central body. (The U. M. W. is still technically affiliated with the C. I. O., although Lewis stopped paying the union's per capita tax to the C. I. O. several months ago.)

TiresHeBought Had Been Used, Marcey Says

Testifying in defense of Hiram Ben Hundley, local tire dealer accused of violation of an OPA rationing order, Capt. Herbert L. Marcey of the White House police force told a District Court jury yesterday that he had "no doubt" that tires he purchased from Hundley were used.

The Government charges Hundley with selling new tires as used to three Washington firms—the Star Publishing Co., the Premier Purchasing Co., and the Diamond Service Co.

Introduction of Marcey's testimony by Defense Attorney Henry I. Quinn was intended to show that tires claimed by the police captain to have been used came from the same stock described by the prosecution as new. Several witnesses, employed by Hundley at his business, 3446 Fourteenth Street Northwest, contended the tires were "change-overs"—slightly used tires turned in by customers as part payment on new ones.

The tires said to have been falsely marked as used had been inspected and approved for sale by authorized District officials, Hundley claims.

Marcey said that his purchases from Hundley had been arranged by Eugene T. Brady, former executive secretary of the District Rationing Board. He knew the tires had been used, he added, because he had removed a pebble from one of them.

Quinn said last night it was possible Hundley and his wife would testify when Justice T. Alan Goldsborough resumes hearings Monday morning.

Give Rubber Scrap, Even Though in Use, Is Plea

Rubber articles which are still being used, but which can be spared, should be contributed to the national rubber collection drive, William R. Boyd, jr., chairman of the Petroleum Industry War Council, said yesterday.

"Even if some sacrifice is involved in giving up these rubber articles," Mr. Byrd said, "we've got to do it. We cannot place our American soldiers and sailors in jeopardy just because we happen to like using rubber or because our personal comfort might suffer.

"What's the use of quibbling over whether there is much or little rubber in a mat and whether it is of high quality or poor," Boyd said. "The thing that counts is that the rubber that these mats contain releases better rubber for more essential uses."

Florida has reported the largest per capita collection of rubber of any Eastern State so far, with collections jumping five times from 1.32 to 5.98 pounds per person during the last ten days. Other Eastern States have begun to bring in substantial amounts, with New Hampshire particularly increasing the rubber pile from an average of only .71 pound to 4.6 pounds.

Wanted: By Army Air Force Band, One Singing Dog

"Auld Lang Syne" was in order last night at the Officers Club of Bolling Field as the Army Air Force Band played a farewell concert for Corpl. Victor Hugo and Col. Leslie P. Holcomb.

Now the band, which Col. Holcomb helped Leader Alf Heiberg organize last November, is looking for a mascot to succeed Corpl. Hugo, the colonel's French poodle. They will leave shortly when Col. Holcomb assumes new duties in the War Department.

Leader Heiberg said he would prefer a dog whose vocal accomplishments would be of value in the band's 30-minute weekly concerts to be played over the N. B. C. network beginning July 23.

Wagner Hit Hard; Boston Trails by 4

21,296 Fans See First Twilight Tilt In Hub's History; Crosetti Homers

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 3.—The Champion New York Yankees, who have appeared to be coming apart at the seams for the past month, stitched themselves back into a four-game lead by taking the opener of their make-or-break series with the second-place Red Sox, 5 to 3, tonight in the first twilight contest in Boston's major league history.

Right-hander Spud Chandler kept eight Boston hits comparatively well scattered while gaining his ninth win and his second decision over the Sockers this season.

The Yankees opened with a three-run splurge against Broadway Charlie Wagner and collected all of their runs and their eight hits before that right-hander was replaced by Mace Brown in the seventh.

The last Yankee blow was Frank Crosetti's fourth homer of the season, which came with two out and none on in the sixth.

With Wagner getting under way in unsteady fashion, the Yankees managed to score thrice in the first inning on a pass to Buddy Hassett, an error by Johnny Pesky on Joe DiMaggio's hard hit grounder and Charlie Keller's single.

Williams Doubles

Chandler turned back the first two Boston batters and then walked Lou Finney to bring up Ted Williams. The crowd of 21,296 greeted American League's temperamental .406-batting champion, who was fined $250 for loafing yesterday by Manager Joe Cronin, with mingled cheers and jeers.

Ted promtply silenced his critics by bouncing a two-bagger off the left field wall and both he and Finney scored when Bobby Doerr found almost the same spot for another double.

The first five hits against Chandler were two-baggers. Bill Conroy dented the left field wall, only to be left stranded in the second inning, and Williams and Doerr belted it again in the third, when their second successive doubles put the Sockers into a 3-3 tie.

Wagner, who has yet to beat the Yankees, appeared to be finding himself in the third inning, when he retired them in order, but the supposedly ailing Bill Dickey signaled his downfall by opening the fourth with a ringing double.

After Chandler sacrificed his heavy-footed catcher to third, although First Baseman Tony Lupien appeared to have ample time to head him off with a throw to that bag, Crosetti singled him over with the winning run.

Dom DiMaggio Singles

The last Boston threat was launched in the fourth, which Conroy started by working Chandler for a base on balls. Dom DiMaggio then lashed out his only single of the game in center and Conroy took third and Dom second, with one out, when brother Joe made a wild throw-in.

Conroy, however, was nailed at the plate when Pesky grounded to Joe Gordon, and the Sockers' last real scoring chance died when Dom was left on third as Pesky was forced by Finney at second.

Ringmenow Wins Stake At Delaware

By the Associated Press

Delaware Park, Stanton, Del., July 3.—Lieut. Col. Gustave Ring's Ringmenow lodged a strong claim for championship honors in the 2-year-old colts and geldings division here today when he raced to a convincing victory over five good rivals in the sixth running of the 5½-furlongs Christiana Stakes.

Taking command of the small but select field of juveniles right at the break, the swift son of Menow and Paradox cut out a swift pace to be first home in the good time of 1:06, three-fifths of a second off the track record.

Chasing Ringmenow under the wire, but beaten a good two lengths, was Christiana Stable's Quillon whiched raced in nearest pursuit of the Ring stalwart all along the route. Quillon never was a match for Ringmenow, but was easily second best and headed Mares Nest Stud's victory three and one-half lengths for the place. Lord Win, racing in the silks of M. B. Goff, earned the small share of the $5000 added purse.

2d World Standard In 48 Hrs. for Hagg; Andersson Is Second, Also Betters Record

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, Sweden, July 3.—Two days after smashing the world record for the one-mile run, Gunnar Hagg tonight did the same thing to the two-mile standard.

The slim Swedish ace, back in action only 48 hours, after being suspended since last fall, ran the long grind in 8 minutes,47.8 seconds in Stockholm stadion to lop 8.2 seconds off Miklos Syabo's recognized two-mile mark and 5.4 seconds off the 8:53.2 Taisto Maki established in Finland in 1939, and which is still awaiting recognition.

Just about the world's "hottest" performer in track and field right now, Hagg put his latest record-smashing contribution alongside the 4:06.2 mile he ran Wednesday night, which chopped one-fifth of a second off Sydney Wooderson's mark, and the 3:47.6 job of scampering the 1500 meters which he turned in a year ago. This last standard is still awaiting recognition by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, which probably will not meet again until after the war is over.

Trailing Hagg home again, just as he did Wednesday, was Arne Anderson, who was locked in 8:51.4, also breaking the two-mile record. On Wednesday Andersson was caught in 4:06.6 equal Wooderson's listed mile standard.

Newhouser's 3-Hitter Wins For Tigers, 5-1

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 3.—Big Hal Newhouser, Detroit southpaw, allowed only three hits tonight as the Tigers battered the Indians, 5 to 1, to pull within one game of the third-place Tribe. Detroit batted around in the first inning, shelling Mel Harder from the mound with six hits and four runs.

Ken Keltner tallied Cleveland's run on a wild pitch in the ninth, when the Indians had filled the bases on singles by Keltner and Buster Mills, and a walk by Ray Mack.

Newhouser fanned 10 and issued five bases on balls. Until the ninth he had allowed only one hit, a double by Catcher Jim Hegan at the start of the home team's half of the fifth.

Detroit's opening Salvo included Bill Hitchcock's single, Barney McCosky's double and Doc Cramer's single, after which Pinky Higgins forced Cramer and went to third on Bob Harris' single. He scored on Rudy York's long fly to center. Jimmy Bloodworth's infield hit was followed by Birdie Tebbetts' single, scoring Harris. Tom Ferrick then took the mound and after walking Newhouser fanned Hitchcock.

In the seventh Higgins drove in Cramer, whose pop fly fell safe among Jeff Heath, Lou Boudreau and Mills for a double.

Wyatt Stops Phils For Dodgers, 8-1

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 3.—Whitlow Wyatt warmed up for his part in the Major League All-Star game by pitching the Brooklyn Dodgers to an 8-1 triumph over the Philadelphia Phils today, yielding only five hits in registering his eighth victory against two defeats.

The Dodgers landed on six Philadelphia hurlers for 13 safeties and put the game away in the fifth inning when they drove Starter Frank Hoerst off the mound, but an umpire's decision caused the remainder of the contest to be played under protest by Manager Hans Lobert of the Phils.

Wyatt led off the fifth by slamming the ball toward the left field bleachers. It appeared to have landed in the lower seats and bounced back to the playing field. Umpire Tom Dunn motioned Wyatt to trot around the bases, but the ball was returned to the infield and Al Glossop tagged Wyatt.

Lobert Protests

Umpire Ziggy Sears, however, ruled that the ball bounced off the bleacher screen and he sent Wyatt back to second base with a ground rule double.

Sears' decision prevailed and play was resumed after Lobert lodged his official protest. Pete Reiser singled Wyatt home and scored himself as Joe Medwick beat out an infield hit, bringing Sam Nahem to the mound to retire the side.

The Dodgers, who also scored single runs in the third and fourth innings, continued their assault on Walter Beck, Johnny Podgajny, Tommy Hughes and Si Johnson, who

Pitcher Gee Voluntarily Quits Game

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 3.—Johnny Gee, the gangling Syracuse N. Y. pitcher who cost the Pittsburgh Pirates $75,000 in 1939, today was placed on the voluntary retired list at his own request, Pirate President W. E. Benswanger announced.

Benswanger said formal approval to Gee's request to retire from baseball had been granted by Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Landis. Gee went with the Pirates in the fall of 1939, winning one and losing two. He hurt his arm in the spring of 1940, attributing the injury to "throwing a curve too early," Benswanger said.

Since 1940 Gee has been shuttling back in the Minors with little success. He had been optioned to Toronto of the International League but last month the option was transferred to Atlanta of the Southern Association. Gee failed to report and asked to be placed on the voluntary retired list.

Auto Racing Prohibited For Duration

A general order prohibiting automobile racing in the United States was issued yesterday by Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation.

The order becomes effective July 10.

All motor vehicle racing meets, including those of the so-called "midget" cars and motorcycles, are forbidden by the order.

The term "race" is defined in the order as "any exhibition, contest, or competitive trial of speed, endurance," including "contests between persons or against time, distance, or previously established records," but not including "tests conducted for and at the request of the armed forces of the United States."

Although all automobile programs held under the official auspices of the American Automobile Association, including the Memorial Day race at the Indianapolis Speedway, were canceled by the A. A. A. last February for the duration of the war, ODT officials estimated that about 1500 cars were scheduled to race in meets not sanctioned by the A. A. A.

Of the 1500 cars now in racing service about 1000 are midgets and 500 are large cars. Approximately 75 per cent of the large racing cars use standard automobile tires and the remaining 25 per cent use standard truck tires. It is estimated that there are at least 12,000 tires in the hands of these racing car owners.

Budge, Riggs In Pro Tennis Final Today

By the Associated Press

New York, July 3.—J. Donald Budge and Robert Riggs, who, between them, have held the National Amateur Tennis title four of the past five years, will settle the professional championship tomorrow in their first turf-court meeting since Budge turned pro in 1938. They will play the finals of the National Professional tournament at the West Side Tennis Club's stadium at Forest Hills, scene of many of their triumphs as amateurs. Riggs couldn't beat the big California redhead as an amateur but he succeeded him as No. 1 man in the rankings, winning at Wimbledon in 1939 and at Forest Hills in 1939 and 1941. Budge and Riggs met frequently during last winter's professional tour, Bobby's first as a pro, with Budge coming out ahead.

Rounding out the finals of the tournament which has been strung out two weeks will be the doubles championship final, sending Budge and Riggs against Frank Kovacs and Bruce Barnes. Alice Marble and John Nogrady will face Frank Rericha and Robert Harmon in an exhibition doubles match.

JULY 4 LEGEND MAY MEAN LITTLE IN A. L.

This is the day when you are supposed to be able to look at the standings of the two big leagues and perceive the penmanship on the wall. The clubs leading their respective leagues on July 4, will go on to win the pennant in September, so the legend goes. But up in Boston they are yelling, "Wanna bet?"

POVICH

There is no quarrel with the old adage, as far as the National League is concerned, what with the Brooklyn Dodgers eight games out in front and galloping, but the American League is a horse of a different hue perhaps. The Yankees can be caught, Boston folks think, and the Yanks themselves, don't like the ways things are going.

What was once an 11½-game margin held by the Yankees over the Red Sox, had dwindled to three games as of yesterday afternoon, and Boston is naturally excited. When the Red Sox and Yanks went into their important three-game series yesterday, they were a contrast in motion. The Red Sox were on the uptake and in high momentum, with 20 victories in their last 24 games. The Yankees were tail-spinning in dangerous fashion, with 11 defeats in their last 16 games, and their hitting falling away to a whisper.

It Was Vastly Different Last Year

At this time a year ago, the Yanks were charging. Joe DiMaggio was well advanced on his 56-game hitting streak and was carrying the team with him. At this point the Yanks do not have DiMaggio to lean upon. His average is a meager .271, and he has hit only one home run in the last month.

Charley Keller is in a companion slump. Bill Dickey and Buddy Rosar, their two good catchers, are hurt. Manager Joe McCarthy is ill. Ernie Bonham, who is supposed to be their best pitcher, has been knocked out of the box in his last two starts, Marius Russo is on the shelf with a sore arm, Phil Rizzuto is hurt, and slumping, First Baseman Buddy Hassett's average has dropped from .325 to .287. The Yanks, apparentiy, are ripe to be knocked off.

All of a sudden the Red Sox have begun to play fine ball, and Boston town is tumbling over itself to acclaim them as the club that will this year end a 24-year pennant drought. Not the least factor in the Red Sox surge is the new spirit of the club, according to Boston newspapermen, who claim to have detected a pennant fever they are comparing with the campus spirit. The hard-boiled professional ballplayers have become infected with a passion for winning the pennant, they say.

Williams May Have Little Too Much Spirit

They may be right. When Ted Williams, Boston's human example of perpetual emotion, emoted to the extent that he sulked on a two-base hit the other day, Manager Joe Cronin interpreted it as an insult to the high motives of the rest of the players, and forced Williams to make an apology to the entire club. Cronin made it stick with a $250 fine, and there were pretty pieces written about Williams' contriteness and his humble request that he be allowed to play in the series with the Yankees. Cronin granted that request, and not by leaning too far backward, inasmuch as Williams is the greatest guarantee that the Red Sox would beat the Yankees.

The form of Williams' emotion was a classic, incidentally. It probably beat anything that ever took place in the mind of a ball player who got sore because he was being heckled from the stands. At first, according to Williams' own story, he was going to get revenge on the Boston fans by standing up at the plate and "taking three through the gut," meaning that he was going to strike out without removing his bat from his shoulder, and how would the Boston fans like that?

And then, after taking two strikes, Williams had another brainstorm. He decided not to strike out and displease his hecklers that way. He'd try to knock their heads off with some fouls into the left field stands. He'd aim at 'em, no less. Well, that didn't quite work, because Williams eventually hit a two-bagger into left field, while trying to foul the ball off, and was compelled to take his hit. It might have been a triple if he hadn't loafed, and that's what got Cronin sore. But everything is patched up now, Williams has said he will be a good boy, and will run out all his hits.

We would never have believed it, but the fact is that another of the Red Sox has displaced Williams in the affections of the Boston fans. He is little Johnny Pesky, nee Paveskovich, and he has been the making of the Red Sox as a pennant contender. He doesn't hit any home runs, but he has been showing the Boston fans the best shortstopping in the league, and when that is said about a Red Sox club, it is obvious that something new has been added, because Red Sox shortstopping has for years been the worst in the league.

This little Pesky is already regarded as one of the most dangerous hitters in the league with his ability to bunt, pull and slap the ball to all fields, and his .322 average is no myth. Beside that, Boston has come to know him as a smart young fellow. They've lately discovered that he was valedictorian of his class in high school at Portland, Oreg., and he's in demand as a public speaker at Boston functions, with more than 40 speeches already to his credit. Maybe, though, that won't scare the Yankees.

Nats Down A's, 4-0, Behind Masterson

Five-Hit Pitching Marks Night Game Here Before 5000; Cullenbine, Early Slug

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

That four-game losing streak the Nats brought home to Griffith Stadium last night is no more. They enjoyed the comparatively novel experience of winning a ball game, beating the Athletics, 4-0, in the first round of the Battle for the Basement.

The winning pitcher was, of all people, Walter Masterson, who in his five years with the Nats has won only 13 ball games. Masterson made light of the A's with a five-hit job before 5000 shirt-sleeved fans. The first hit he allowed was a two-bagger. Thereafter there was nothing more than a single, and he never permitted more than one hit in any inning.

The Nats scored their four runs off Dick Fowler, rookie right-hander, by the simple expedient of putting two and two together—in the fourth and sixth innings. That's when they collected five of their seven hits.

Masterson was in complete charge of the A's and only in the first inning did they have more than one man on base. In fact only two of the A's ever did reach second.

Roy Cullenbine, who collected two of the Nats' hits, and Jake Early, who weighed in with a hefty triple in the sixth inning, powered the Nats' attack.

They didn't get a hit off Fowler until the fourth inning and then they got three—and two runs. Stan Spence led off with a single to right and languished on first while Vernon popped up. But Cullenbine banged a two-bagger to right and the Nats had the bases filled when Estalella drew a walk. Early fetched one run home with a long fly to right, and Sllivan produced the other with a single to right.

Fowler halted the damage to two runs at that point by purposely passing Pofahl and striking out Masterson.

But in the sixth the Nats came back for more. Cullenbine swatted a single to right and was forced out by Estalella, who took second when Knickerbocker threw wild on a double-play attempt. Then it was that Early whacked a three-bagger to right center to score Estalella. Sullivan walked and Pofahl produced a long fly that moved Early home.

It was just as well the Nats did their damage against Fowler. Russ Christopher, who relieved him at the start of the seventh, gave up only one hit and no runs at all.

Masterson rode out what might have been a rough first inning. After getting two out, he pitched a left field two-bagger to Siebert and walked Bob Johnson. Happily for the Nats, Buddy Blair lined the third out into Pofahl's glove.

The former Philadelphia sand lotter walked three batters during the ball game, but he was never in trouble after that first inning. The only man who reached second base in the last eight innings was Davis, who singled to left with two out in the seventh and advanced on a passed ball. Masterson disposed of Pinch-hitter Christopher on a ground ball to Estalella to escape any damage.

Nats Meet Macks In 2 Games Today

The two clubs will toss their top pitchers into the twin bill with Bucky Harris starting Early Wynn in the first game and Sid Hudson in the second. New Route Marks July 4th Marathon Here

Field of 27 Topped by Don Heinicke

7 Washingtonians Entered in Today's Annual Event; 9 From Baltimore

At least 27 and perhaps as many as 40 runners will be at the starting line today as the fifteenth annual 10-mile run of the District of Columbia Recreation Department, a July 4 fixture, is staged on an entirely new course. The time will be 1:30 p. m.

The starting point, contrary to custom, will be near the Marine-Navy statue on Mount Vernon Boulevard, though, the finish line again will be the Takoma Park swimming pool, Fourth and Van Buren Streets Northwest.

With a field of 27 already assured, officials last night pointed to Don Heinicke, twice winner of the event, as the man to watch. The Baltimore legger, representing the White Horse Social Club, will head a contingent of nine runners from that organization.

Only seven runners have signed up from Washington, all from the Washington Athletic Club. To the first finisher among these will go the D. C. A. A. U. championship. Harriers from Roanoke, Va.; Philadelphia, and Brooklyn make up the bulk of the remaining field. The lists will remain open until starting time, however.

Organizations assisting the Recreation Department with details are the District Chapter of the Red Cross, the Metropolitan Police, the Park Police, the Takoma Park Citizen's Association and the Metropolitan Police Boys Club.

All entries will report at the District Building, Fourteenth and Pennsylvania Avenue, for a physical examination at 11 a. m. this morning.

500 'Fished Out' Balls Go to Rubber Pile

New York, July 3 (AP).—For 40 years Mrs. Angela Temple has made a hobby of fishing out tennis balls and rubber play balls that floated by her houseboat in Harlem River.

She painted them gay colors and strug them together to make a sun shade on the deck.

Today she said the whole collection—500 balls—would be donated to the Nation's rubber scrap pile.

Junior Anglers Find a Paradise in Maryland

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., July 3.—A "fisherman's paradise" for juvenile anglers opened its third season today with Lake Culler in Frederick the site of young rod and reel enthusiasts casting this week.

Opened as an experiment in 1939 by municipal officials and local sportsmen, the lake fishing, which is limited to boys and girls under 15, has increased in popularity until now hundreds of young advocates of Izaak Walton line its banks after the thousands of blue gills, sunfish, crappie, carp and catfish stocked there for their pleasure.

Armed with all types of equipment from the traditional bent pin hook and birch rod to expensive rods and reels loaned by generous fathers, the young fishermen are required to observe certain rules in the Culler Lake fishing. Each angler is limited to five fish, and the hours of angling are from 8 a. m. to noon and from 3 to 6 p. m. three days weekly.

The lake fishing idea was broached by members of the Frederick County Fish and Game Protective Association and was readily accepted by Mayor Lloyd C. Culler and members of the board of aldermen. The sportsmen's organization pooled funds with the city and stocked the lake three years ago with thousands of fish.

When the lake opened to juvenile fishing on July 1, 1939, over 300 boys and girls tried their luck. When the season opened this week 55 were standing on the lake rim ready to cast when the 8 o'clock barrier was lifted.

Teaches Sportsmanship

One of the purposes of the lake fishing is the teaching of sportsmanship and proper fishing technique, according to Clarence C. Carty, local sportsman, who was the prime backer of the lake fishing plan. The youngsters are taught to respect the rights of other fishermen and to become proficient in the use of equipment. Many are learning to use artificial flies, which require expert handling.

Most bait used by the kids is the common earthworm or night-crawler. Some use shrimp or liver and a very few employ live minnows.

When the fish are biting it is not uncommon for the anglers to toss the fish back as fast as they are caught so as to avoid catching the limit of five and thereby being forced to leave the lake.

The plan has proved so successful that other cities are making inquiries. Several cities in the Middle West are considering lake fishing for juveniles with the same rules in force here.

Upper—Five of the junior fishermen who may be seen at any time of the day around Culler Lake, in Frederick, Md., are shown pridefully displaying a day's catch. The lake is reserved at all times for boys and girls 15 years and under. Below—Here both sexes crowd around the lake's edge at the exciting cry—"I've got a bite"

Lou Gregory Favorite in A.A.U. Grind

By the United Press

Fall River, Mass., July 3.—Lou Gregory of New York's Millrose A. A., the nation's top middle-distance runner, is favored to retain his title in the National A. A. U. 15-kilometer race that features this city's Independence Day celebration tomorrow.

Gregory expects strong opposition from a fast field that includes such experienced competitors as National Marathon Titlist Joe Smith of Medford; Little Johnny Kelley of Arlington; Lieut. Joe McCluskey of the United States Navy; Ellison (Tarzan) Brown of Westerly, R. I. and the veteran, Clarence De Mar of Reading.

Milkman Smith won the classic Boston A. A. Marathon in record time April 19 while Kelley is the present New England 10 and 25 kilometer champion. The aging McCluskey has switched to distance running after a long campaign as a 2-mile star.

200 Oarsmen Compete Today

Detroit, July 3 (AP).—Two hundred amateur oarsmen representing nine clubs will seek championships in a two-day Central States Regatta starting tomorrow on the Detroit River. Eight junior events are on the holiday program tomorrow, with eight senior events Sunday.

The Suburban Ecorse Boat Club, coached by the veteran Jim Rice, who is observing his fiftieth year as rowing instructor, is host. Other entries are the Minnesota Boat Club, St. Paul; Leander Boat Club, Hamilton, Ontario; the St. Louis, Central and Western Rowing Clubs, all of St. Louis; Lincoln Park of Chicago, and Michigan boat clubs from Detroit, Wyandotte and Lincoln Park.

Service Funds to Profit From Arlington Races Today

Stars and Stripes Handicap Tops Program; Best Seller in 12-Horse Field

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 3.—Fashionable Arlington Park will run off a star-spangled race program tomorrow, turning over the entire net receipts on its biggest day to Army and Navy Relief.

The program will be headed by the $10,000 Added Stars and Stripes Handicap with possibly 12 starters.

Benjamin F. Lindheimer, chairman of the operations committee, said the track hopes to present $120,000 to the two relief societies, the largest single contribution by any sports event to date. This would better Belmont's high of $107,000. Lindheimer expects more than 50,638 paid attendance of a year ago, which stands as a track record, and a mutuel play that may threaten the track's all-time high of $1,300,000 set in 1930 for the running of the Arlington Classic.

The Stars and Stripes Handicap, with a gross value of $13,125, will draw a field including Best Seller, winner of the Equipoise Mile last Saturday; Steel Heels, which won the Stars and Stripes last year; Staretor, which ran second in the 1941 Kentucky Derby; Sirocco, winner of the 1940 Arlington Classic; Woof Woof, Crusader and Equifox.

Best Seller will carry top weight of 122 pounds in the absence of Whirlaway, which is keeping his engagement in the $30,000 Butler Handicap at Empire City, New York, tomorrow. Equifox, son of the famous late "Chocolate Soldier" and leading stake winner of the recent Lincoln Fields meeting, probably will go to the post as one of the favorites along with Best Seller, Owner Howard Wells of Lexington, Ky., kept Equifox out of the Equipoise Mile last Saturday for tomorrow's race of a mile and three-sixteenths, which is more to Equifox's liking.

Mize, Ott Lead Giants to Win Over Braves

By International News Service

New York, July 3.—The New York Giants outlasted the Boston Braves in a twilight game tonight to win a 10 to 6 victory. Big Johnny Mize and little Mel Ott, the one-two punch of the Polo Grounders, led off the barrage with home runs in the opening inning. Mize's was his thirteenth, Ott's his twelfth, with the former now leading the National League in that department.

Catcher Hand Danning had a perfect day at bat for the Giants with a double, two singles, a walk and a stolen base. Mickey Witek rapped a homer in the fourth inning and Billy Werber scored three runs.

Tommy Holmes and Clyde Kluttz smacked round-trippers for Boston, Holmes connecting in the third and Kluttz in the eighth. Bob Carpenter, the Giants' bespectacled pitcher, was credited with his eighth victory.

Bucs Repel Rally in 9th, Beat Cards, 5-4

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 3.—Although outhit, the Pittsburgh Pirates beat down a desperate ninth inning rally to jolt the St. Louis Cardinals, 5-to-4, today and drop them another full game behind Brooklyn. The Cards took the series, however, three games to one.

With two away in the closing frame, the Cards shoved across two runs on a pair of singles and a double and had the tying score on base as the side was retired.

Only this last minute splurge marred the excellent pitching of Johnny Lanning, right hander, who held the Redbirds to nine hits going into the ninth. Lloyd Dietz, Pittsburgh's ace relief hurler, was called in to stop the rally with two pitches to Terry Moore.

Veteran Lon Warneke, who served up two home run balls in the first two innings, was the loser. Elbie Fletcher hit into the center pavilion seats in the opening frame and Vince DiMaggio connected for a homer in the second, with no one on base.

Whirlaway Heads Butler Handicap Field

Turf Star Nears Seabiscuit's Money-Winning Record; Can Earn $23,000 by Victory

By the Associated Press

New York, July 3.—They're going to set off a $23,000 firecracker on Empire City's short stretch tomorrow, and the explosion figures to blow Whirlaway right next door to Seabiscuit's all-time money winning record.

Warren Wright's 4-year-old was head man in a field of eight named today for the mile-and-three-sixteenth Butler Handicap, highlighting tomorrow's holiday card at the Yonkers racing plant, from which war relief is to get the entire net proceeds—possibly reaching $100,000.

Even though Whirly will be packing 132 pounds and spotting all the others in the field from 20 to 32 apiece, he probably will be something like 1 to 5 to turn loose his stretch lightning and pick up the pot, despite the fact he's never seen Empire before in his much traveled career and will be running over a strange layout.

Will Boost Bankroll

If he does as expected, Wright's whizz-bang will boost his bankroll to $427,436, thereby moving up to where he'll be just $10,294 from the Biscuit's all-time high of $437,730. He expects to make up that difference, with quite a bit to spare, in the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk July 15, and go on from there to become the first half-million-dollar breadwinner in turf history.

There is nothing in the field tomorrow that is even a fraction of the race horse the Kentucky cannonball is. Mrs. Payne Whitney entered both her handicap campaigners, The Rhymer and Swing and Sway, but these two finished behind Whirlaway in the Brooklyn Handicap a week ago, so there's no reason to expect them to pull a reverse play if this is a truly run race, despite the fact they're carrying only 112 pounds each, compared to Mr. Bigtail's milk wagon load.

The rest of the field includes Tony Pelleteri's Bay View, the surprise winner of the 1941 Santa Anita Handicap; movie man Harry M. Warner's Paperboy, A. J. Sackett's Tola Rose, Tom Howell's Olympus and William Woodward's 3-year-old filly queen, Vagrancy, who may be withdrawn.

Drew Benefit Card Has Good Advance Sale

An encouraging advance sale, helped by the boxers on the card, has given Monday night's boxing show assurance that the widow of the late Preston Drew will receive more than $1000 from the Griffith Stadium benefit. Drew, who fought on the last local show, died from injuries received in the ring. Promoter Joe Turner is staging nine bouts and 48 scheduled rounds of fighting with net receipts being turned over to Mrs. Drew.

The majority of the fighters are donating their services and the two main-event principals, Jimmy DeChard of Washington, and A. Reiss, of Detroit, are turning back part of their purses. The main go is scheduled for eight rounds.

With fellows like Wayman Stewart, who is meeting Lew Hanbury in a six-rounder, and the Petro Brothers hustling tickets, Promoter Turner is looking forward to a good crowd for this mostly local card.

Georgie Parks, colored lightheavyweight, who chilled Gus Mirman three weeks ago for Mirman's first loss, is down for a six-round bout with one "Dynamite" Walker. Charley Petro meets Billy Morris and Danny Petro engages Leon Hawkins. Both are four-rounders.

In the other six on the card Roy Dunn meets Ken Stribling. The other four-rounders pair Eddie Kane with Curley Blum; Bobby Gantt with Jimmy Hill, and Leon Kennedy with Billy Lewis.

DeChard has been training nightly at the Apollo gym while Reiss has worked here twice at Turner's Arena. DeChard expects to scale 189 and Reiss 181.

Fighter Ross Weds New York Dancer; 2d Time for Both

By the Associated Press

San Diego, July 3.—Barney D. Ross, 32, former welterweight boxing champion, now a corporal in the Marine Corps, and Miss Catherine Howlett, 25, a dancer, were married today by Superior Judge Gordon Thompson.

It was the second marriage for both Ross and his bride, who said they were natives of New York and had been friends many years. Ross is attached to the recreational office of the Marine Corps.

Mrs. Henderson Wins Congressional Golf

Mrs. D. H. Henderson was first in Class A of a ladies flag day golf tournament held yesterday at Congressional Country Club. Behind her were Mrs. M. R. Paul and Mrs. E. S. Hanson.

First in Class B was Mrs. Dixon Lewis. She was followed by Mrs. H. L. Cobb, Mrs. Mahlon Meier and Mrs. D. L. Moorman. Lowest number of putts was won by Mrs. H. A. Knox with 31.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 3.—What interests you?

BASEBALL?—Then listen to Ford Frick, president of the National League. "We haven't given much publicity to our baseball equipment fund. We didn't want to stress it too much, for fear it would interfere with Army and Navy relief, the USO and the Red Cross.

CONSIDINE

"But it's darned important nonetheless. The Government has no funds for providing sports equipment in the many training camps in this country. When a company is sent abroad, a big box of sports equipment of all kind goes with it on the transport. But in addition to many domestic calls for baseball equipment, we still get calls from abroad. On the same day recently I got letters from boys in Iceland and Africa, begging us to find some way of sending baseball bats, balls and gloves to them. And we did—by bomber, with the help of the Army.

"This is our problem, and we don't intend to bother the public about it. So far we've bought and shipped $50,000 worth of equipment at a total administrative cost of $62.67. That has taken care of about 10 per cent of the requests. The first $100,000 raised by Monday's All Star game at the Polo Grounds will go into this fund, and that will take care of perhaps 22 per cent of the requests from camps. We're going to take care of the rest, before this thing is over, even if it costs us half a million."

RACING?—Whirly goes tomorrow. It will be his first start at Empire City. He's headed not only for Sea Biscuit's mark of $437,730 in winnings but also for the untouched mark of $500,000. A victory tomorrow in the Butler Handicap, in which he will be assigned top weight, of course, will advance Whirly beyond the $430,000 mark. Beyond the Butler lie the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap and the $25,000 Arlington Handicap. If he stays sound—and right now it's hard to picture the beautiful long-tailed colt as anything but sound—he should become the first half-million dollar winner in turf history before the month is out.

If his part-time nemesis, Market Wise, doesn't go against him in the Butler, we expect him to go to the post so heavily favored that the track will actually lose money on his place and show payoffs when he wins. The law says that no matter if a horse is 1-to-100 in the betting, the bettors must be paid at least at 1-to-10.

BOXING?—We ran into Billy Conn the other night and asked him if it were true that he's boxing daily, at camp, secretly preparing for a fight later this summer against Corporal Louis.

"Hah!" he laughed. "That's a laugh. I don't have time. I haven't had a glove on or been anywhere near a ring for a year. And I won't get near one, until I get permission."

We asked the good-looking and cocky private if he had read that Louis had told reporters that Conn was the only man he would fight.

"What else could he say?" Billy asked with disarming frankness. "I'm the only guy he can draw money with."

TENNIS?—We wrote recently that Bobby Riggs should knock off Don Budge in the finals of the United States Professional Championship, to be decided tomorrow at Forest Hills. Then we ran into Budge, who is a good pal of ours.

"You sure get crazy ideas," Big Red said, with honest wonder. "I beat Riggs 20 out of 30 times on that pro tour last winter, and would have won 23 if I hadn't come down with the flu towards the end. I'm playing pretty well; well enough to beat Riggs. You see, Riggs plays about the same all the time. He doesn't have ups and downs. If I'm hitting the ball hard, and they're going in, I win. If I'm missing, he outsteadies me and wins. I'm hitting them well—slow court or no slow court. He's pretty easy to score against when I'm hitting the ball, because he gives me a lot of setups to hit."

We asked Don how long he was going to play tennis.

"I dunno," he said. "Maybe two or three years. Or maybe I'll quit when I get like Vines. Vines told me once, 'I used to run you guys to death. Just stand back there and watch you run. Then one day I realized you guys were standing back there, and I was the one who was running. So I quit;' that might be a good time to call it a day."

GOLF?—We can't print it—yet. But one of the big sports stories of the war is brewing in golf. The principals in the story are doing much racing back and forth between New York and Washington. The story will involve a dozen top-notch pros. In their quiet way they have been doing more than any given group of athletes in any other sport, but they have much more of a contribution in mind. We'll let you know. Don't go away.

All-Star Game Is 6-5, And Take Your Choice

First Time Americans Haven't Been Favored; Short Stands Will Help N. L.

By Bob Brumby

International News Service Sports Writer

New York, July 3.—If you wish to wager some cabbage on Monday's All-Star baseball game, you can lay 6 to 5 and take your choice of either the American or National League teams.

Previous to this season the Americans had been favorites throughout the ten-year history of the annual classic. Until today, however, it appeared the Nationals would go into this season's test as favorites because of all-round strength and power.

But the gamblers, remembering the explosive timber in American League bats wielded by Joe DiMaggio, Ted Williams and Bill Dickey, hammered the odds down to even money. Of course the gamblers insist on a one-point margin for themselves, but they always exact their pound of wagering flesh.

The fact that the game is being played at the Polo Grounds, where the right-field fence is a whisper away, gives the National League an advantage, with the exception of Williams and Dickey—and Dickey has lost a lot of his power with age—the American League batting strength is preponderantly on the right side.

Conversely, the Nationals are laden with left-handed fence busters. Leo Durocher, who will pilot the senior league players as a result of his Brooklyn Dodgers' winning last year's pennant, intends to take full advantage of his portside hitters who will be gunning for that 257-foot right field barrier.

Durocher plans on putting Johnny Mize, Mel Ott and Pete Reiser to full use. Mize, as first baseman of the Giants, and Ott, as manager, have had plenty of practice firing at the picayunish target. Reiser, leading the league, cares little what park he is performing in, just so he has a bat in his hand.

The probable National League batting order will be as follows:

Both setups are subject to change, of course, at the discretion of Durocher and Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees, who will direct the American League. But today the order given above appears to be what will greet a hoped-for sellout crowd.

Proceeds of the All-Star contest will go to the ball and bat fund, which furnishes baseball equipment to Army and Navy posts. The winner of the All-Star game will meet an All-Service team of Army and Navy stars Tuesday night in Cleveland. Proceeds of that game will go to Army and Navy relief.

Feller Will Pitch For Norfolk vs. Quantico July 25

By the Associated Press

Newark, N. J., July 3.—Bob Feller, former Cleveland Indians pitching ace, will hurl for the Norfolk Naval Training Station nine against the Quantico Marines in a Red Cross-Navy Relief sports program July 25 at Ruppert Stadium.

Kay Kennery, Newark Club secretary, made the announcement.

The service teams will meet in a five-inning preliminary to an international league game between the Newark Bears and the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Miss Nicholson Wins Cumberland Golf Title

Cumberland, Md., July 3.—Mrs. Somerville Nicholson won the women's golf championship of the Cumberland Country Club in the spring handicap finals, defeating Mrs. Fred W. Mills, 6 and 5. She had carried off the honors in the second flight, Mrs. Nicholson playing out the full 18 holes, carding 108 for the layout.

Cushlamacree Drives to 1½ Length Victory at Charles Town

High Plaid Second to $5.60 Shot

Root Rides Victor In Bomber Purse; Sprint Next to Last On Victory Program

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., July 3.—Cushlamacree, under a good ride by Jockey Ralph (Buddy) Root, drove to a length and a half victory in the Bomber Purse, featuring the Friday program of the Victory meeting, which will be concluded with the running of tomorrow's program. The 3-year-old daughter of Mr. Bones and Cushion came to the wire in advance of J. H. Ladley's High Plaid with the Heloria Stable's Pavilion third. Only six competed in the test of 6½ furlongs.

With Jockey Root substituting for the suspended Jockey E. Fort, the crowd played Cushlamacree as if the race had already been run and all hands seemed satisfied when a price of $5.60 was posted. The winner was clocked for the sprint route in 1:20 1-5.

Pavilion and Pandoramint struggled for the early pacemaking honors and the former won this phase of the race. Cushlamacree, in the meantime had been pinched off along the rail and Root steadied the filly. On the backstretch, Cushlamacree obtained racing room on the inside and shot up. Root then guided to the outside of Pavilion and waited for the stretch drive. In the straightaway, Cushlamacree drew out gradually. High Plaid came with a rush at the close, but too late to get to the winner.

Jockey Root also rode the winner of the first race. He took Royal Fleet to the top from the outside post position and the son of Sun Meadow stayed there, winning by four lengths from Mrs. M. E. Whitney's Tippy. Big Sneeze was third. The winner paid $7.20.

The daily double paid $17.20. Jockey Carson Kirk rode R. L. Pearson's Saddling Bell to victory in the third race to put the finishing touches on the twin bet after Willie Dufford booted W. C. Bell's Oddree to the wire in the second event.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Last chance to do your share to help Army and Navy relief and West Virginia charities at Charles Town's victory meeting today. Remember, every bet you make helps these good causes. There's no strings to the victory meeting. Every dime of profit goes in the big fund. Charles Town has gone all-out. All they ask is for you to come out. When Fran Cronan announced on the loud speakers that Jockey Danny Scocca was resting well, the boy was given an ovation by the crowd. He is in the Delaware Hospital, Wilmington, Del. Drop him a line. Race fans hereabouts get a day off on Monday, but will swing back into action Tuesday at Hagerstown. Jockey George Napier was a visitor yesterday and says he will ride at Hagerstown. The horses of Capt. Ewart Johnston will be shipped to the other track as will those of Mrs. E. D. Sowers and R. C. Waple. Starter John Morrissey departs after today's card for Pascoag, R. I., and goes to work there. Bill Daly will take Hagerstown entries for the horsemen who stay at Charles Town. The lists close at 9 a. m. Friend Ray X. Merchant came through with some more of that fine apple juice. I almost forgot to mention "Spike" Collins, who, despite his injured leg, did a lot of nice work for the victory meeting here. You can't keep a good newspaperman down. One of the things I don't like about leaving Charles Town is bidding goodby to that fried chicken at Gaylord Inn. We had some amazing form reversals yesterday. Trainer Claude Feltner has come up with plenty of fit horses. Last chance to see you on the rail at Charles Town and I do want to see each and everyone of you. BILL.

First race—SAINT PYREWICK may take te top and lead all the way in this short sprint. RED WINGS seems to be losing form but is still dangerous. NAVIGATION goes a route that suits.

Second race—WAKE could be the right one if the track is fast. MISS HILDUR has speed and belongs close in this company. ADHELMAR for the show end.

Third race—BRAXTON needs a fast track, will be hard to beat in this field. DISCRETION will be a keen factor. AFTER ORCHIDS is in light.

Fourth race—ROYAL BUSINESS has been sharpened for this handicap. Gets in light and I'm going to string along. SARAN will have opposition while trying to set the pace but never was better. DARBY DU is a threat.

Fifth race—TRY FLYING has been rested of late. Packs 123 pounds but has the speed to carry it this short route. HIBLAZE and REMOLEE to take care of the place and show.

Sixth race—GINOBI promises to go to the front and should stay there. PART ONE is as sharp as the proverbial tack and is dangerous. ALLEN CAID to take care of the others.

Seventh race—BRAZEN HUSSY is tossed in this with lightweight and I look for her to take it all. INDIAN SEA belongs close with this kind. GREAT STEP could get into the money circle.

Eighth race—BUSY FINGERS is the class in this field and needs only the right handling. GALWAY will be close in this company. PHANTOM PLAYER for the show end.

Ninth race—BATTLE LINE seems the best suited in this distance affair. ANNIKIN is good now and is one to beat. AGNES KNIGHT gets in with featherweight.

Substitute race—If this event is used I'll take SOUGHT AFTER, DIVIDEND and BILL BLEIWEISS. Best bet—BRAXTON.

Spencer Sets Record in Va. Amateur

'39 Champ Shoots a 31, 4 Under Par

Clark and Fulton Eliminated; Jack Hamilton, Medalist, Defeats Egleston

By Barton Pattie
Associated Press Sports Writer

Hot Springs, Va., July 3.—Wynsol Spencer of Newport News, seeking to regain the Virginia State championship he won in 1939, today touched off the most amazing blast of amateur golfing fireworks ever seen on the Cascades course when he advanced in match play to the quarter-finals.

He equaled Cascades' exacting par in eliminating George Fulton, jr., of Roanoke, one of the State's top ranking collegiate linksmen at Hampden-Sydney last season, by 4 and 3 margin in the morning round.

Firing really began, however, in the second round this afternoon when he went out against Wayne Clark, Portsmouth, in 31, four strokes under par and a course record. He added two pars to this to wind up the match on the eleventh. The lowest amateur card ever recorded in competition over the entire Cascades layout was a 70, one under, and Spencer could have coasted a bit and still topped this mark had he played the round out. Sam Snead, when he set an all-time low for the Cascades of 64, needed 32 strokes on the out nine.

Spencer out ..... 444 254 323—31

Medalist Jack Hamilton of Newport News also was sizzling hot in second-round today, besting Charles Egleston, heralded Camp Lee entry, 4 and 4. Another tourney favorite, former Champion Sam Bates of Norfolk had a close call, winning from Bill Tomlinson, Richmond, 1 up when the Richmonder three-putted the par three eighteenth.

Aulick Burke, Petersburg, played well to down Meredith Watson of Petersburg and Camp Lee, 4 and 3; Billy Battle, Charlottesville, took a close one from L. B. Peterson, Newport News, 2 and 1.

George Payton, Newport News, losing finalist last year to Walter Cushman, Charlottesville, who is not defending his crown, gave Sam Crobaugh, Camp Lee, 3 and 1 licking. Howard Musser, Richmond, nosed out Fred Robinson, Newport News, 1 up on the nineteenth in the hardest fought match of the second round. Harry Thompson, veteran Richmonder, bested D. E. Berry, Norfolk, 2 and 1.

Tomorrow's quarter-finals will send Hamilton against Musser, Bates against Burke, Spencer against Battle and Payton against Thompson.

No Upsets Recorded

For the first time in recent history of the tourney, there were no upsets in the opening round of play this morning. Most of the matches were routs, and two defaults were recorded.

Tomlinson and young John Whittle of Martinsville, had the only real close scrap. It was nip-and-tuck all the way. Tomlinson finally got a 1-up lead at the fifteenth with par 3 to Whittle's bogey, but the broadshouldered Martinsville schoolboy dropped a 30-foot putt for a birdie 2 on the eighteenth to send the match into extra holes. They halved the nineteenth, but Tomlinson, steadier and more experienced, won the twentieth green with a par 4.

Harman Walker of Newport News, who has been a consistent championship contestant for a decade, was forced to default to Hamilton because of a back ailment. J. J. Harding of Emporia, defaulted to Burke.

Bates swamped Harry McCready of Portsmouth, and Watson crushed Richard Schwartzchild of Richmond, by 7 and 6 margins, while Egleston ousted C. M. Mark, Richmond, and Peterson topped W. W. Wood, Newport News, by 6 and 5 each. Even more one-sided was Berry's 8-7 defeat of Gerge Farrar, Clifton Forge.

Quarter and semifinal rounds will be played Saturday and the 36-hole finals are set for Sunday.

Follow Me Wins Goshen Trot Feature

By the Associated Press

Goshen, N. Y., July 3.—Follow Me, owned by G. L. Hemp of Camp Hill, Pa., and driven by youthful Eddie Havens, won the Coaching Club trotting Oaks for 3-year-old fillies today as the Grand Circuit program finally got under way.

The program originally was scheduled for Wednesday but was postponed because of weather conditions.

Miss Thelma, from the Dunbar Bostwick Stables, was the favorite but she finished fifth in the first heat and third in the second.

The Harriman Challenge Cup for 2-year-old trotters went to Scarlet Hanover, the heavy favorite owned and driven by W. E. Miller of Washington, D. C., after finishing fourth to Austin Hanover in the opening heat.

Fastest time of the day over a rather slow track was the 2:07½ made by Toronto in winning the 22 pace. The winner is owned by Joseph Neville of Delaware, Ohio, and was driven by Wayne Smart.

Five races are on tomorrow's program, the trotting handicap for amateur drivers having been added to the regular guard.

Surprise Fishing Catch Is an Owl

Frederick, Md., July 3.—In looking over his bush-bobs which he set in the Potomac River near Bakerton, W. Va., B. Harwood Watson of Brunswick, was surprised the other day to find that among his catch was a large owl. The bird was believed to have been attracted by the bait bobbing on the surface of the water during the night, and dived for it, and was hooked.

Two Great Lakes Stars Find Navy a Door to Big Leagues

Only Minor Leaguers With Service Star Team, They Consider Tuesday's Game Big Break

By the Associated Press

Great Lakes, Ill., July 3.—In the case of Ernie Andres and Chet Hajduk, the shortest distance between the minor and major leagues is via the Navy.

The two members of the Great Lakes naval training station baseball team are the only minor league players listed on Lieut. Mickey Cochrane's squad of Service All-Stars for the benefit game with the major leaguers at Cleveland Tuesday.

Although Cochrane declared he will not name his starting line-up until the day of the game, it almost is certain that Andres will be in it. Hajduk is bound to see some action, although probably he will not start.

"It's a big chance to bump shoulders with the big boys," the two agree. "We're lucky to get into a game which many major leaguers will miss."

Andres, property of the Boston Red Sox, was third baseman three years for the Louisville Colonels of the American Association before joining the Navy. On the Great Lakes team he has clipped a .366 batting average, second only to Joe Graves (St. Louis Browns) with .407.

Andres also has driven in 57 runs in 44 games to lead the team. Thus, this minor league star is one of Cochrane's brightest pupils and will come in mighty handy at third, especially since the skipper has no other hot corner player in his squad of lush talent.

Hajduk was a first baseman for Waterloo, Iowa, in the Three Eye League last year and reported for spring training with the White Sox this season. He broke camp early to enlist. After seeing him play against Chanute Field Thursday night, Sox Manager Jimmy Dykes said Hajduk had improved 100 per cent since spring.

Frank Baumholtz, the third Great Lakes minor leaguer, was commissioned an ensign this week and will be unable to play. The former Ohio University basketball ace roamed centerfield for Ogden, Utah, in the Pioneer League last year and belonged to the Cincinnati Reds.

A possible starting nine for the Cleveland game might run like this:

Bob Feller of Norfolk, Va., (Cleveland) pitcher.
Vincent Smith of Norfolk, (Pittsburgh) catcher.
Johnny Sturm of Jefferson Barracks, Mo., (Yankees) first.
Benny McCoy of Great Lakes, (Athletics) second.
Andres, third.
Cecil Travis of Camp Wheeler, Ga., (Washington) shortstop.
Joe Grace of Great Lakes, (Browns) right field.
Pat Mullin of New Cumberland, Pa., (Detroit) centerfield.

35,000 Seats Sold for Game At Cleveland

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 3.—Nearly half the 80,000 seats in Cleveland Stadium have been sold for Tuesday night's baseball business here between the services and the American-National League all-star game winner.

Thus unless the last-minute customers named Gus decide to stay home and leave all the pitching to Johnny Rigney, Bob Feller and others officially appointed to put it over, the Army and Navy Relief Fund clash will be nothing like a private party.

An official reckoned today that some 35,000 ducats already had been sold, pointing to at least a near-sellout crowd for hostilities between Lieut. Gordon S. (Mickey) Cochrane's fighting team and the victor of Monday night's interleague scrap in New York.

Intensive solicitation of industries produced much of the advance sale. Recognizing a worthy cause and a good attraction when it saw one, an aviation parts plant came through for 2,000 tickets and other industries have approached the figure. Therefore, the spokesman continued, an overflow crowd depends on the number of fans who feel Tuesday that the skies, and regular prices plus $1 for War Stamps, warrant the trip to the big seat warehouse.

Big puddles of weather on the field, either at the Polo Grounds or here, would merely delay things one day.

Reinforced by other service stars, Cochrane's Great Lakes (Ill.) Naval Training squad, went to Kalamazoo, Mich., today to continue its warmups by battling a semi-pro club. Around 10,000 are expected to see Great Lakes meet a reinforced Camp Custer (Mich.) team at Briggs Stadium in Detroit tomorrow with Cochrane and Pitcher George Earnshaw—the battery that once helped Connie Mack's Athletics to real championships instead of the cellar kind—reunited for part of the clash.

By Sunday, 14 members of the service team will be here for a stadium workout, with the remainder following Monday. As usual in cases of this kind, even the working newspaper and radio men are buying their own tickets to tell all about it to those who positively can't be here.

The Phils scored their lone run in the fifth when Pinchhitter Ron Northy singled after Ernie Koy had walked and moved to third on a single by Bobby Bragan and an outfield fly.

Hoerst was charged with the defeat, his ninth against three wins.

The victory added a full game to the Dodgers' National League lead since the second-place St. Louis Cardinals lost to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Blasts Wreck Two Oil Tanks In Harlan, Ky.

By International News Service

Harlan, Ky., July 3.—Two explosions, apparently caused by dynamite, today wrecked two huge storage tanks of the Gulf Refining Co. in Harlan. Fire which followed destroyed all wooden buildings on the property.

Six persons were injured, one critically. Property damage was estimated at $500,000.

Standard Oil Co. tanks a short distance away were saved but hundreds of tons of scrap rubber collected in the present drive were destroyed.

State highway police held three men who were registered at a Harlan hotel and who gave their addresses as New York City. One, police said, spoke in broken English. An FBI agent questioned them.

Three of the injured were company employes. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cox, who live not far from the property, were burned when their home caught fire. Mrs. Cox was critically injured.

The detonation rocked downtown Harlan and many windows were broken.

Survey of Rail Link to Alaska Third Done

The War Department disclosed last night that the Army has surveyed about one-third of a proposed railway route to Alaska to supplement the inland highway already under construction.

Engineers working since early spring with wartime speed and secrecy have mapped in detail some 400 miles of a projected 1300-mile route linking Prince George, British Columbia, with the existing Alaska railroad in the vicinity of Fairbanks, Alaska.

The line, the War Department said, would round out a four-way means of access to the strategically important far nothern territory which now is linked to the continental United States only by sea and air.

Canada Cooperating

Supplementing the guarded report made to Congress last month by Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell that a railway was "under study," the War Department said plans called for extension of existing rail lines to reach Alaska by the shortest possible route.

Preliminary work is being carried on by the Corps of Engineers, which also is building the highway, and "complete cooperation" has been received from the Canadian government.

"The survey follows in general the 'B' route proposed by the Alaskan International Highway Commission, in an almost straight line up the Rocky Mountain trench," the War Department said.

"The first step taken was a complete air reconnaissance of the route from Prince George to possible connections with the Alaska railroad in the vicinity of Fairbanks. Hour hundred miles of the contemplated route have already been surveyed and located, in spite of the primitive nature of the terrain and the difficulty of establishing communications between survey groups and the division offices.

Col. Goerz in Charge

"Pole-boats, pack-trains and chartered planes bring supplies to the survey party from bases established on sea lines and at railheads. Work on the Alaska portion of the route is half-way completed."

Directing the survey is Col. P. Goerz, district engineer at Seattle, under general supervision of Col. Richard Park, North Pacific division engineer. The survey is scheduled for completion by October 1.

Field work, the War Department said, is in charge of Lieut. Col. James G. Truitt of the Seattle district. To assist him, the Canadian government has loaned the services of Maj. J. L. Charles of the Canadian Engineers, who, like Col. Truitt, was described as an experienced railroad locating engineer. Cooperation also has been given by Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Resources Planning Board who is an authority on Alaska and a veteran of railroad operation.

Farmers Get Roosevelt Plea To Pay Debts

By Ovid A. Martin
Associated Press Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday called upon farmers to help with the Government's anti-inflation campaign by diverting a larger share of their expanding income to the retirement of their debts, estimated by credit authorities to aggregate 10 billion dollars.

Payments of debts at this time, the Chief Executive said, would make it easier for farmers to go through the postwar readjustment, as well as reduce the demand for short supplies of civilian goods and provide creditors with money with which to buy war bonds.

"Farmers, like all citizens of the Nation, fear inflation," the President said.

Mr. Roosevelt's plea was made in a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Wickard indorsing efforts of the Federal Farm Credit Administration to get farmers to make substantial payments on Government farm mortgages.

Agriculture Department economists estimate that farmers owe debts equaling about 21 per cent of the total value of all their property—including land, houses, machinery, livestock and other goods. This debt included about seven billion dollars in long-term farm mortgages, $2,580,000,000 of which the Government holds, and three billion dollars of short-term obligations.

The President's request for debt payments was made after Agriculture Department officials had estimated that farmers would receive a toal cash income of at least 14 billion dollars this year, or $3,200,000,000 more than last year.

Reflecting an unprecedented demand for food for war needs, the prospective increase in income comes during a year when the Government is endeavoring, through higher taxes and bond sales, to cut civilian buying power to the level of a reduced output of civilian goods.

The Government is anxious also to prevent the extra farm income from creating a major land boom such as occurred during World War I, when farm real estate values almost doubled, only to crash in the postwar period and send thousands of debt-burdened farmers into bankruptcy.

Along with Mr. Roosevelt's recommendation to farmers was issued a statement by Gov. A. G. Black of the Farm Credit Administration that last year its farmer-borrowers made "substantial progress' in reducing their debts. He said that those borrowers had paid 205 million dollars on the principal of the $2,580,000,000 in farm mortgages held by the Government. Of this amount, 80 million dollars represented loans paid in full, prior to maturity.

Extra 2-Pound Sugar Ration To Be Allowed

American housewives will be allowed an extra two-pound sugar ration for every member of the family for a 44-day period starting next Friday, the Office of Price Administration announced last night.

Extra sugar also will be available for industrial and institutional users, Price Administrator Leon Henderson said.

All the housewife has to do to obtain her sugar "bonus," OPA explained, is to cash in ration stamp No. 7 any time between Friday and August 22. Ration stamp No. 5 will still be good for a two-pound ration until midnight, July 25, when stamp No. 6 may be used to obtain two pounds until August 22.

On or after August 15, OPA said institutional users (restaurants, hospitals, etc.) will be allowed 75 per cent of normal needs instead of 50 per cent, as at present, while industrial users will receive 80 instead of 70 per cent.

Extra allowances for institutional and industrial consumers will be good for one allotment period only, it was explained, but while the "bonus" to this class of users will not become available until August 15, these consumers may step up their rate of consumption in anticipation of the increase.

Shipments from off-shore sugar-producing areas have been "somewhat" heavier than was anticipated when the present half-pound-a-week ration was fixed, OPA stated in explaining the first sugar allowance increase since rationing in this commodity began last May.

Henderson's announcement follows published reports of huge accumulations of sugar, but the price chief declined to make any promises about raising the present basic ration. There is no assurance, he said, that the shipping situation will remain as favorable as it has been in the last two or three months.

Wickard Seeks Plan to Move Migrant Labor

By the Associated Press

College Station, Tex., July 3.—The Department of Agriculture is working on a plan to pay for transportation of migrant workers to harvest areas where labor shortages are acute and to set up more camps to house them, Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard said today.

In a speech prepared for delivery at the dedication of a new AAA headquarters building in Texas, Wickard warned that while the Nation's present food situation is favorable, "I don't think our future prospects for food are as good."

He listed difficulty in getting farm labor, fertilizer and new machinery as major problems to be met.

"The thousands of migrant workers that farmers have depended on are not following the crops as they did," the Secretary said.

"They used to transport themselves in their old jalopies. Now these cars are breaking down and their tires are wearing out. We must find a way to make the labor of these people available to farmers. We already have made an agreement with the railroads for lower fares for these people, but that in itself is not enough.

"We are working on a plan for the Government to pay transportation expenses, and to set up more camps to house the workers

WPB Studies Regulation of Store Stocks

By the Associated Press

The War Production Board established a special policy committee yesterday to determine whether Government control over stocks of wholesale and retail stores is necessary to prevent hoarding.

Joseph L. Weiner, deputy director of the WPB civilian supply division, said the committee would devote about six weeks to the study, and that "no plan for such control is now in existence and none will be formulated until after the committee completes its survey."

Complaints Heard

"No one can tell at this time whether inventory control will have to become a part of our war program," Weiner declared. "There have been complaints from storekeepers in war industry areas that they have been unable to acquire adequate stocks because the larger stores and chains apparently have been indulging in vigorous buying at the expense of the small retailer. This situation will be investigated thoroughly by our policy committee.

"Obviously, we cannot permit hoarding by some retail warehouses are stocked with 8, 10 or 12 months' supplies of certain articles, while small stores cannot get stocks of these goods for their customers.

"If it is found that this condition is widespread throughout the country and threatens to continue, inventory control may be the only logical answer to the problem."

However, reiterating that no Government control was imminent, Weiner urged merchants not to make "panic decisions in an effort to anticipate a regulation that may never be adopted."

Read Heads Survey

Eaton V. W. Read, chief of the civilian supply division's wholesale and retail policy section, was appointed chairman of a survey group. Other members are Irwin D. Wolf of Aspinwall, Pa., vice president of the Kaufmann Department Stores of Pittsburgh, who will concentrate on problems in the retail fields, and John A. Donaldson of Kenilworth, Ill., vice president and treasurer of Butler Bros. of Chicago, who will study problems of wholesalers.

The three men, assisted by a staff of technical experts in the merchandising field, face the job of surveying wholesale and retail enterprise throughout the country to determine how inventories are placed and how different wholesale and retail establishments build up their stocks. They will hold a series of informal meetings with representative merchants before making their report, Weiner said.

New York Cotton

New York, July 3 (AP).—Cotton futures rallied late today to close 55 to 70 cents a bale higher. Hedging and profit taking were absorbed by trade buying and preholiday covering.

Nervous liquidation was apparent just before midday after President Roosevelt, intervening in the deadlocked farm bill situation, strongly supported the Administration's demand that Congress authorize the sale of surplus grains below parity.

Predictions that the Senate next week might pass legislation granting 100 per cent of parity on crop loans overshadowed uncertainties, however, and prices gradually advanced.

Tax Forum

By A. W. Robertson
Chairman, Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.

Proposed Tax Rates Will Leave Corporations Weakened for Postwar Reconstruction Job

After considering the corporation-tax program recommended by the Ways and Means Committee as set forth in various news releases, I am convinced that such a program will seriously affect the future of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. I am prompted to call your attention to the situation for such consideration as you may think it merits—particularly since the Westinghouse property and employes in your State, and the livelihood of the thousands who supply it with raw materials and services, will be directly affected by the situation of the company.

The Westinghouse Co. is not easily disturbed. It has survived wars, panics, and booms for more than a half century. During that time it has employed two generations of workmen, and in some cases, grandsons of former workmen are working for the company. It has prospered and made money for its stockholders and employes and for additions to its plants. It is still making both ends meet, as my mother used to say, but now most of the money earned will be paid in taxes and relatively little will be left for either dividends or necessary amounts that must be retained in the business.

Every company finds need for additional money from earnings from time to time, due primarily to the fact that the future is uncertain and mistakes are made. Unless additional money is available from some source, a company that is unfortunate enough to expand in the wrong direction will not be able to correct its mistake after it is found. This can weaken any company. A company must keep on growing or old age and decay will overtake it, and a company can grow only through money. Money is its lifeblood.

The country at large and all its citizens will suffer loss if a company like the Westinghouse Co. fails through lack of funds to meet emergencies, and if it fails other companies will fail for the same reason. Where will men work if there is no Westinghouse Co. or similar companies? Where will men invest their savings if not in such companies? Who will care for those whose investments are lost if these companies fail? And who will care for the pensioners whose pensions will stop if their company fails?

It has been said many times that the power to tax is the power to destroy. I am sure you agree with me that among the obligations and duties which rest upon the shoulders of Congress is the duty to act wisely when it enacts tax laws.

The trend I refer to is well illustrated by a comparative statement of Westinghouse earnings and taxes for the first quarters of the years 1941 and 1942 (at bottom of this article).

The significance of the figures lies in the fact that notwithstanding the great increase in output which should and did increase the operating profit and the gross income, the final result was a substantial reduction in net income on account of the great increase in Federal taxes, which taxes were accrued at a rate less than that now proposed. Further, this reduction in net income for the 1942 period came about after the company had completed new financing to the extent of more than $56,000,000 of which over $36,000,000 was obtained from the sale of additional stock that in good faith essentially involves a 20 per cent increase in the company's dividend liability.

A preliminary examination of our income for April, 1942, discloses a net income of less than $1,000,000 after provisions for taxes on a business of over $41,000,000. This represents a return of slightly over 2 per cent on such business and less than 50 per cent of the net income for April, 1941. This is not enough profit to pay even modest dividends to stockholders and continue reasonable wages to employes, without considering the well-recognized necessity to make some financial provision to cover present and postwar conditions. We are alarmed over the situation. We are frankly wondering what is to become of the company.

I am entirely sympathetic with a program that will impose heavy taxes on so-called excess profits, provided the true excess profits are really established. I am also sympathetic with the substantial taxation of so-called normal profits, but surely the application of a combined normal tax and surtax rate of 40 per cent after taxing excess profits at a rate of 94 per cent appears excessive. Such a tax program as that proposed may entirely eliminate the essential incentive to accomplish economically that expansion in production which is now so vital.

On top of these taxes is an insistent drive to reduce profits, which of course will reduce our taxes at the same time as they reduce our net income. And the final straw might be considered the increase in all expenses which is taking place on account of operating precautions due to the war, as well as threats of other increases.

In my judgment, Congress should move cautiously in proposing substantially higher taxes against corporations at this time without a careful survey of their future effect on the national economy. I have been somewhat impressed with suggestions which I understand have been made that percentage of corporation profits before taxes be treated as tax free and then invested in Government securities to be held in trust for the corporation for its use in the rehabilitation program that surely must follow the end of the war.

It is hardly necessary to add that this is not a plan for war profits. It is written to emphasize the fact that we must have money left after paying expenses and taxes in any form are expenses), if we are to keep the factory doors open and do the job that must be done 24 hours a day.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, July 3 (AP).—Wheat prices tried to advance today on the strength of good milling and flour trade demand but the market wilted late in the session.

Early gains of a cent a bushel were converted into fractional net losses before the close. Late selling was blamed on hedging in connection with the new crop movement, prospects of large receipts in the Southwest the first of next week and estimates of private crop experts suggesting total harvest may exceed 900 million bushels again this year.

Conflicting claims from the battlefront in Egypt also unnerved many dealers who evened up accounts late in the session, not wishing to be away from the market two days when there is a possibility of important war developments. President Roosevelt's statement urging Congressional approval of Government wheat feed sales at prices below parity also attracted attention but counter-claims made by farm bloc spokesmen left traders as much in the dark as ever about eventual settlement of the price controversy.

Big Response

Questionnaire Of This Type Is Popular

By the Associated Press

A Government questionnaire aimed at reducing the number of Government questionnaires brought an enthusiastic response from American businessmen, Senator Murray (Democrat), Montana, reported yesterday.

Murray, chairman of the Senate's special committee to study the problems of small business, reported that 40,000 letters were sent out to firms over the Nation asking how much of their time was taken up filling out Government reports.

"We got replies from almost all the 40,000," he said, "and there wasn't a single complaint about filling out this particular questionnaire. This time they had found one they didn't mind answering.

"One large rubber company said it cost $100,000 a year to answer questions propounded by various governmental agencies. But the cost in dollars wasn't the worst of it. They said it took their most important officials an average of an hour each day to fill out the reports.

He cited the case of a Massachusetts businessman who said one of his three office employes spent all his time making out Government returns and reports.

Murray is the author of a bill to coordoniate all Federal reporting services and eliminate duplicate and overlapping requests for information. Under his proposal, the director of the budget would correlate such requests and try to make a single questionnaire do the work of three or four.

Cons. Gas Files Simplifying Plan

Philadelphia, July 3 (AP).—Consolidated Gas Electric Co. asked the Securities and Exchange Commission today for permission to simplify its corporate structure.

The company proposes to redeem $7,490,600 of first lien collateral trust sinking fund bonds of its subsidiary, Central Gas & Electric. This would be done by part of the proceeds from sale of new first mortgage bonds to be issued by Central Indiana Gas Co., Citizens Gas Co., Florida Public Utilities Co., Hoosier Gas Corp., Houghton County Electric Light Co., Lynchburg Gas Co. and Maine Public Service Co. These proceeds are received by Consolidated in payment of debts owed by the subsidiaries and pledged under the Central Gas indenture.

Trust Officers Questioned in Bond Tumble

By the Associated Press

New York, July 3.—Officers representing "one of the largest investment trust funds in the country," described as a purchaser of a "considerable bloc" of Wisconsin Central Railroad Co., Superior and Duluth division and Terminal 4 per cent bonds, were questioned today in the resumed inquiry ordered by Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., into the reason for a sharp decline in the security June 30.

Assistant Attorney General Max Furman talked to the president and executive officer of the trust fund, which he said purchased bonds having a face value of about $500,000. The bonds cost about one-fifth of the face value, Furman said. In all, he said, the inquiry thus far indicates that bonds having a face value of $1,897,000 were purchased by one organization.

The officials today told Furman, he said, about written as well as oral representatives concerning the future of the Wisconsin Railway bonds. He added that these oral statements implied "inside information" on the entire situation.

Furman said that one of the oral statements made to the investment trust "is admittably false." Mr. Furman did not disclose the name of the investment trust nor the names of officials to whom he spoke.

Furman explained that much of the acquisition of the Wisconsin Central bonds was in stock exchange transactions but that sales were conducted in the over-the-counter market. The bonds were purchased from February 5 to June 30, in which period the price range ran from $12.50 to $35.

Furman said that he had asked other purchasers of the bonds to come in and discuss with him their transactions. These conversations were expected to be resumed next Monday.

Retail Sales Rise Slightly in Week On Holiday Spur

New York, July 3 (AP).—Retail stores reported to Dun & Bradstreet that preholiday buying had given a slight lift to sales volume this week.

Some stores noted a greater stress on "backyard vacation" supplies, such as garden furniture, grills and yard games, the mercantile agency's trade review said.

The improvement, however, was less than usual for the season and total volume of sales was estimated 3 to 7 per cent below a year ago.

Only the South and Pacific Coast showed increases from 1941 figures, with gains of less than 4 per cent. Decreases included New England 4 to 9 per cent, East 6 to 9, Middle West 3 to 7, Southwest 2 to 5 and Northwest 6 to 11.

Wholesale markets continued quiet, most buyers confining purchases to minimum requirements. The review found that while volume was well under the record-breaking levels of 1941, it was favorable, compared with the more normal rate of 1940.

American fighting men throughout the world will tell their relatives and friends back home just how they are observing Independence Day today in a special C. B. S program which you'll hear over WJSV from 7 to 7:30 p. m.

Soldiers, sailors and marines stationed in such widely separated parts of the world as Honolulu, the Canal Zone, Australia, Ireland and Egypt will take part in the ceremony of remembering the day that America became free. Incidentally, "The People's Platform," scheduled to present its 200th performance on the air at that time today, postponed that aniversary to make way for the special July 4 program.

Other Independence Day programs to be heard over WJSV include:

"Calling Pan-America" at 6:15, during which good neighborly greetings will be brought via the air waves from Latin-America in the form of music and talks by high government officials from Rio de Janerio, Montevideo and Mexico City.

Canada's tribute to the United States is a program called "The Treasure They Guard," which will come from Toronto under auspices of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. It will be a dramatic sequence based on those words of George Washington and will include orchestral music directed by Samuel Hersenhoren.

Maj. Gen. Russel Maxwell, chief of the United States Military Mission in North Africa, and Richard Casey, member of the British War Cabinet from Australia, speak from Cairo, Egypt, at 11:05 a. m.

The Post Radio Highlights

11:30 a. m., WOL—Faith of a Fighting Nation. From a vital war industrial center, Leon Henderson will give a talk. Grace Moore, Metropolitan Opera soprano, will sing. Governor Hurley of Connecticut also will speak.

11:45 a. m., WINX—The D. of C. Chapter of the American Red Cross has Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, wife of the former Russian Ambassador, in an interesting interview concerning that country.

4 p. m., WRC—Pan American Holiday—Liberty is the theme for the July 4 program. The setting is Bayano and Yara, Cuba.

7 p. m., WJSV—American fighting men throughout the world tell their relatives and friends back home how they are observing Independance Day.

Auto Tax Stamp Enforcement Still Vexes Treasury

Officials of the Treasury Department's Bureau of Internal Revenue said last night they had reached no decision on methods of enforcing regulations which require motorists to buy $5 use tax stamps, but indicated that hopes for a strict check on compliance with the levy are tied up with the prospects of Nation-wide gas rationing.

In the 17 States where rationing already is in effect, motorists will be required to write on their new ration books the serial number which appears on their use stamp, and when they buy gas, station attendants must check the number on the ration book with that on the stamp. But if Nation-wide rationing goes out of the window, they said last night, the chances are they'll have to depend on the forces of their own deputy collectors. Although it hasn't been requested, some help is expected from police agencies.

Already, it was stated, police of many cities are cooperating by reporting traffic violators who turn up without the stamp.

In Washington, where 192,841 stamps of the February issue were sold this year, Postmaster Vincent Burke, reported that through Thursday a total of 169,000 $5 stamps had been sold since June 10.

Violators are subject to either a fine of $25 or a jail term of 30 days.

Contract Bridge

Neither East nor West of today's hand had enough strength to double Frank K. Perkins. Boston champion, at his contract of three no trumps; but if declarer had attacked the wrong suit he would have lost his game. South succeeded in taking nine tricks by keeping the dangerous hand out of the lead.

Today's Hand

NORTH DEALER

	♠ Q 3 ♡ A 7 4 ◇ A K J 9 4 ♣ 10 6 2
♠ A J 9 4 2 ♡ 10 6 5 ◇ 6 2 ♣ K 9 5	NORTH WEST EAST	♠ 10 8 6 ♡ J 9 8 2 ◇ Q 8 5 ♣ 8 7 3
	SOUTH ♠ K 7 5 ♡ K Q 2 ◇ 10 7 3 ♣ A Q J 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 4 ♠.

West opened his fourth-best spade and Perkins played the queen from dummy. When it held, he led the ten of clubs from North, losing the finesse to West's king. West shifted to a diamond, but as declarer had three club tricks and three hearts in sight, he cashed the ace and king of diamonds to run nine tricks for the contract.

After the queen of spades won the first trick, East had to be shut out of the lead to prevent him from returning a spade through South's king and giving West enough spade tricks to set the hand. The diamond finesse, therefore, could not be risked, for it would have been fatal to lose it.

If East had produced the ace of spades to win the first trick, declarer would have played differently. He would have held up once on a second spade lead, and then would have won the third round of spades with his king.

In that case it would have been West who must be kept out of the lead to prevent his cashing the two long spades. The diamond finesse, therefore, would have been tried instead of the club finesse, and even if it lost, Perkins still would have made three-odd, taking four diamonds, one spade, one club and three hearts.

The deal illustrates the avoidance principle of keeping the dangerous hand out of the lead.

MADAME SANDHURST, YOUR TRICK OF BARRICADING YOURSELF WAS QUITE CLEVER! IT IS TRUE THAT I WOULD LOSE FACE IF I CALLED FOR HELP TO GET YOU OUT...SINCE MY SENTRY DOES NOT SPEAK ENGLISH, HE WILL THINK I PUT YOU THERE MYSELF...
OF COURSE, YOU AND THE CHILD WILL GET HUNGRY... I KNOW YOU WILL NOT MIND STARVING—BUT IT WILL BE A BIT UNPLEASANT TO WATCH YOUR DAUGHTER WASTING AWAY... I WILL DROP AROUND FROM TIME TO TIME TO SEE IF YOU HAVE CHANGED YOUR MIND...
YOU WILL BE HAPPY TO KNOW THAT YOUR GUERRILLA FRIENDS ELUDED US...PERHAPS YOU WILL EVEN EXCHANGE SOME TRUE DATA, ON THEM FOR FOOD—AS THE CHILD GROWS WEAKER...

WE PROBABLY CAN'T GET HOME—BUT WE PASSED SOME FLAT COUNTRY COMING OUT—WE'LL TRY A LANDING—AND REPAIR THE SHIP OR DESTROY IT!

MY DUTY
AS AN AMERICAN

I will realize that no task is too arduous . . . no sacrifice too great . . . if I am to count myself among those who can proudly say: "I did my share! I helped win America's glorious fight for freedom!"

I will pledge myself to give as much as I can . . . and then give AGAIN! I will "do without" joyously . . . and do my part toward hastening Victory by buying more . . . and more . . . War Savings Bonds and Stamps!

I will remember, too . . . that there are hundreds of small ways in which I can be of help . . . and I will promise myself not to lose sight of any little duty which, on first thought, might appear trivial to me!

- I will do my utmost to conserve any . . . and all materials which my country might need . . . now . . . or in the future!
- I will not hoard . . . or waste . . . or grumble over sacrifices I may be called upon to make . . . now . . . or in the future!
- I will not spread rumors . . . for idle talk may cost lives . . . and it will be my solemn duty to prevent others from doing so!
- I will safeguard my health . . . so that I will be ready . . . if—when—and in whatever capacity . . . my country may need me!
- I will keep my "chin up" . . . come what may . . . and do my best to spread cheer—and create a spirit of unity around me!
- And . . . when all is said and done . . . I will thank the powers that be . . . that I am an American! And I will do all I can to prove my everlasting faith in the greatness of my country!
